A Whole New Ballgame...The Lady Trojan basketball team had one of the most successful seasons ever. That winning attitude prevailed throughout the halls of NCCHS. Turn the page, and you will have a front row seat for some of the best action of the season - the 1992 school year at NCCHS.

Students find changes upon return

Changes bring Newby attitude

On August 27 students of the New Castle Chrysler High School returned to the classroom, either as sophomores trying to find their way around a new setting, or as veteran upperclassmen, looking ahead to the years to come when they could sleep in on the first day of school.

Anyone who entered the building could immediately see that some changes had taken place during the three-month summer vacation. The most notable change was found just inside the front doors of the building. Just before school began, John Newby was reassigned from his job as assistant principal in charge of curriculum to interim principal.

"I considered it to be a challenge and an opportunity to pursue my professional growth," Newby said. "It also gives me a chance to be the head of one of the finest high schools in the state."

Two heads are better than one...Seniors Mike Schatzlein and Jennifer Haskett find that working together on an assignment is much easier than doing it alone.

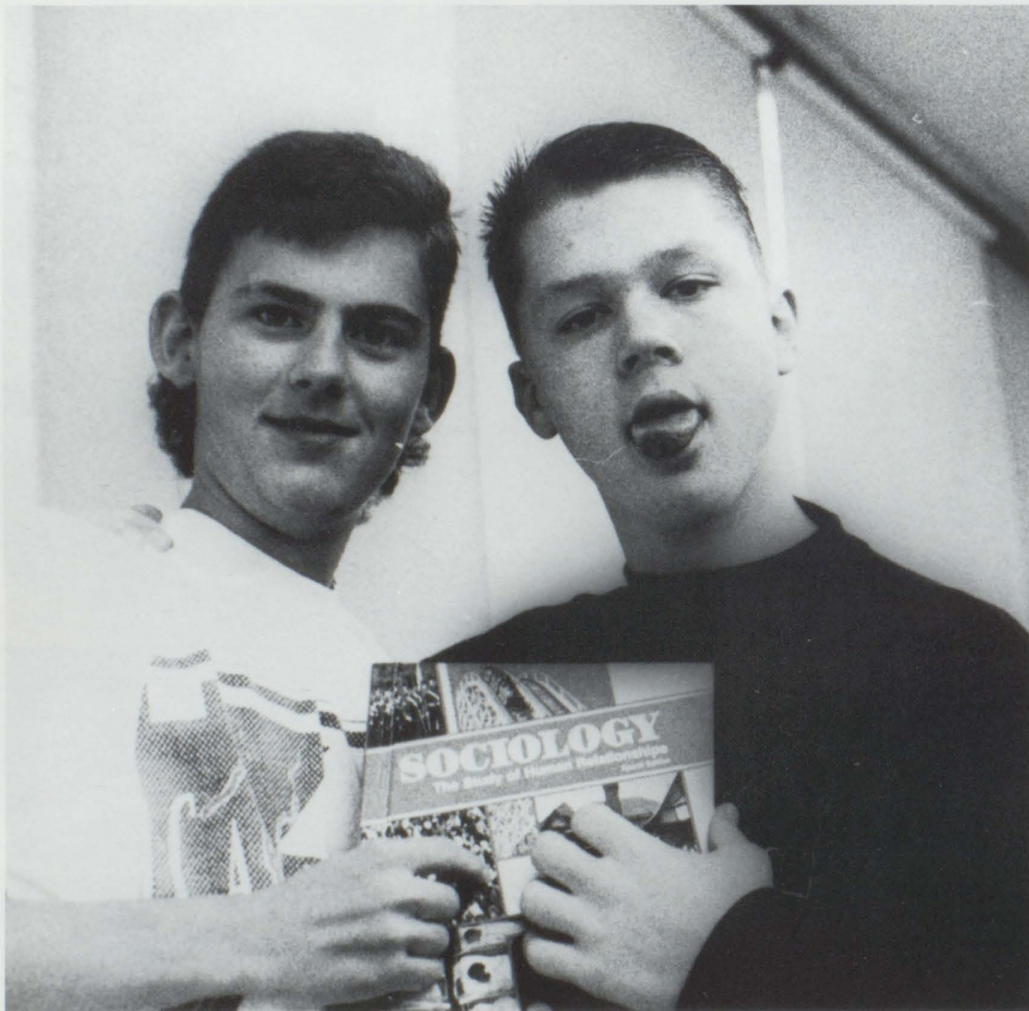

Three tardies and you're out

Positive attitude is nothing new

While the focus of change at NCCHS seemed to center on the change in administration this year, there were other more subtle differences that were introduced, also.

Attendance and tardies became the focus of attention this year. Mr. Alford's voice became familiar to students who missed school, but didn't call in. During the second semester, a new tardy policy was implemented. This new plan "wiped the slates" of students with tardies clean, giving students two "free" tardies for the second semester. On the third tardy to any one class, offenders were assigned a Saturday suspension. The fourth tardy was another freebie, but every odd tardy after that earned another Saturday.

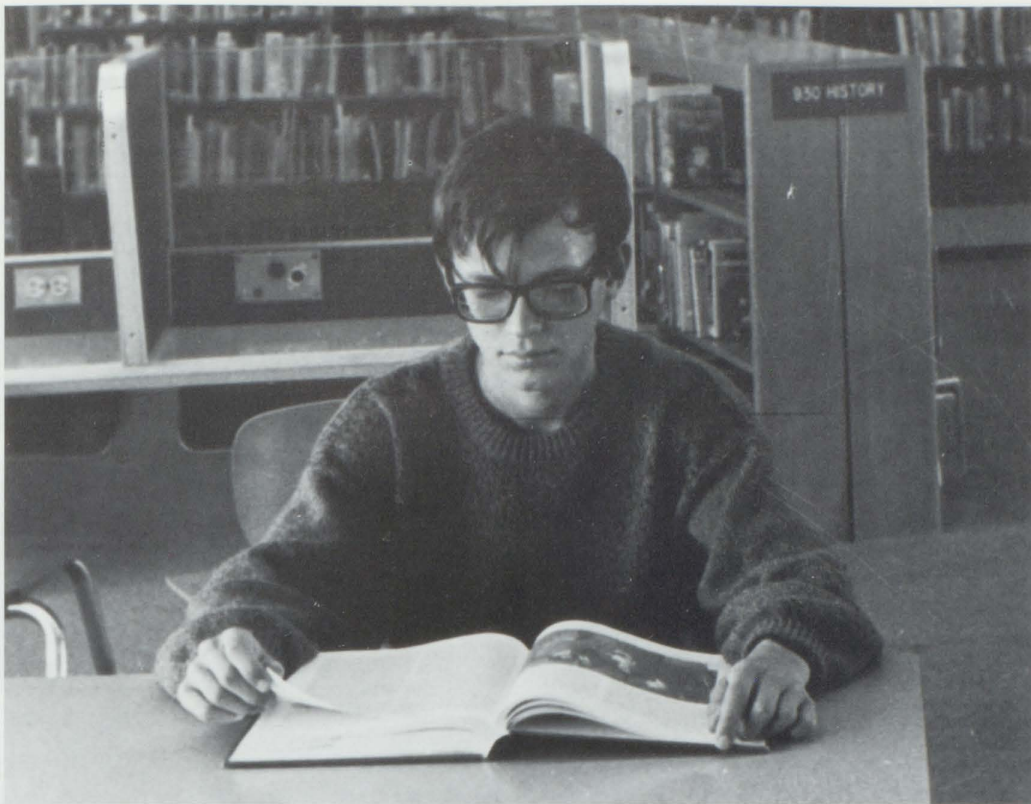

Throughout the school year, one thing remained consistent, however. From the administration to the teachers to the students, everyone maintained the positive attitude that has become a trademark of NCCHS.

Student Life

A new class of people

Academics and athletics were not the only important things at NCCHS. Students did have lives.

As with every year, students looked forward to many special events during the year.

First on the agenda was the first major dance of the year. This year the traditional winter dance was moved to an earlier date, making it a fall dance.

During the evening, couples were invited to experience a "Passport Around the World".

"Having a fall dance was a good idea," senior Collin Asberry said. "That way it wasn't so close to Christmas."

"It doesn't matter when you have it," junior Amy Guffey added, "just as long as the evening is special."

Also in the fall

many students were selected to spend a weekend with administrators, teachers, and other students at the Trafalgar Leadership Camp.

Seventy NCCHS students made the journey to Trafalgar this year. During the two-day camp they spent time getting to know each other and themselves, and learning how to be positive role models for other students in the school.

To accomplish these goals, everyone, including the adults, participated in a variety of activities, from playing games to solving problems to watching movies.

"It was definitely a lot of fun," senior Eric Hollar said. "I would go back again in a heartbeat."

Outside of school, students found time to have fun, also. On weekends, students could be found at the theater, at the Muncie Mall, or just sitting in McDonald's talking.

Time out...Senior Shawn Tabor seems to be having a good time at Fall Dance.

Take a breather...The refreshment area was a popular gathering spot for couples to rest during the dance.

Let's dance...Sophomore Raeanne Ballinger tries to coax her date, junior Bobby Duvall, into dancing.

Students dance around the world

On November 23, 1991 only $22 bought student couples "A Passport Around the World". The traditional winter dance was changed to fall, but the fun was still the same.

"Fall dance was one of the funnest dances I've been to," junior Paula Miller said. "I had a really good time."

"It was really fun, but also sad because it was the last fall dance I will get to attend in high school," senior Angie Abrams added.

A new feature debuted during the evening of the dance, as the neighboring Indiana Basketball Hall of Fame played host to a post-dance celebration. Students were treated to more dancing, refreshments, and the crowning of the fall dance king and queen, seniors Brandon Knotts and Leslie Brock.

"I really enjoyed post dance," junior Amy McDowell said. "It added excitement to the evening."

Dance the night away...Seniors Troy Lumaye and Jennifer Haskett try out the latest dance steps.

The big news is... Junior Heather Crawford recognizes her classmate, Jennifer Cleveland, for her work as prom chairperson before naming the king and queen.

Dance, dance dance... Junior Valerie Lamborghini seems to be enjoying the music.

No one gets seasick on this journey

A mermaid, a rock and several couples found enchantment "Under the Sea" during the formal prom dance. Couples entered the sea world through a tunnel draped with fish and other sea creatures on their way to the dance floor at the bottom of the fieldhouse, where they were joined by Ariel and other creatures from Disney's The Little Mermaid.

Midway through the evening, juniors Arika VanDam and Mark Brock were crowned prom queen and king. Their court consisted of juniors Rob Beatty, Eric Booth, Cam Cochran, Chuck Cooley, Court Donnell, Jason Holmes, Paula Miller, Tina Rains, Kelly Roop, and Kim Snell.

"This year's prom committee did a super job of organizing things and getting them done," junior class sponsor Beth Hobbs said. "This is one of the best groups I've worked with."

Being good isn't always bad

Camp develops positive leaders

Being a positive leader is a trait many students wished to develop. During the leadership camp at Trafalgar, students and teachers learned to be just that. Chuck Roach, a school administrator, worked with the group, mixing learning with fun, to motivate them to use teamwork to get a job done.

For many, the camp provided the opportunity to meet and interact with new people. "Going to Trafalgar enabled me to meet a lot of new people," junior Tiffany Luellen said.

Each student attending the camp was assigned to a group. Throughout the weekend, the groups worked together to solve problems, using the idea of teamwork. The philosophy of two heads are better than one was enforced.

"Working together makes it much easier to get the job done," senior Brad Blackburn said, "And, it was fun at the same time."

"I encourage everyone to go if they have the chance," senior Collin Asberry added.

Total control...Senior Matt Semler seems to be in a good position as members of his group adorn Mr. Newby.

People

A new class of people

The number of students at school declined a little bit this year, but the enthusiasm of those who were there was definitely at an all-time high.

"At NCCHS effort isn't just a term we use," senior Cary Solida said. "It's something we practice every day."

"The students

here are always willing to do what it takes to get the job done," senior Collin Asberry added.

Evidence of the commitment of students and staff was apparent every day. Throughout the year special events were offered. In December a food drive canned over 1900 items which were donated to Westminster, then distributed to less fortunate people for a holiday meal. In the fall, students and staff dug deep into their pockets to support the United Way.

Study hall. Junior Heather Crawford seizes the opportunity for a few quiet moments of study before the test.

Honorable mention... Seniors Josh Hamilton and Honey Bowman proudly pose beside a sign recognizing them as two seniors of the week.

"It makes me feel good to know that I am able to support activities in the community while I'm still in school," senior Jim Prince said.

Making the transition of moving into a new class of high school was a challenge at first for some, but most were able to adjust and become comfortable with their roles within the school.

Sophomore Andrea Kalander found that success came with effort. "The harder you try, the farther you'll go."

Some students had to adjust to new surroundings at school and a whole new lifestyle. Six exchange students visited New Castle during the year.

"America is great," senior exchange student from Toby Schroeder from Germany said. "I'm having fun."

In the game of life, the people are the players. In this game, it's quality, not quantity, that counts.

What subject do you feel will help you most in life?

“ I think that my child care vocational class will help me later on in life. I've learned many ways to "teach" children the things that they need to know for their lives. Traci Lovett.

I think economics will benefit me the most later on in life. Mr. Miller has taught me things about money that I never knew, that I will definitely use in the future. Wendy Restivo

What should colleges look at more: SAT scores or grades?

I think that grades should count just as much as SAT scores because some people don't take tests very well, and colleges should have something else to look at.

Chris Bertram

Colleges should count more on grades, because not everyone can take tests as well as others.

Rate of exchange good at NCCHS

This year's foreign exchange student program brought six students to NCCHS.

One of these students was Kirill Danishevski from Russia. He stayed with the family of Jeremy Ayres. Kirill made the trip during an extremely turbulent time in Russian history - during the breakup of the Soviet Union.

Kirill was the first student from the Soviet Union to visit NCCHS.

Visiting from Denmark was Peter Thomsen. Peter stayed with Emily Willis and her family. He was a member of both the cross country and the swim teams.

Two students came to the United States from Germany. First was Tobias (Toby) Schroeder, who was involved with the swing choir.

"People in the United States are more open to everybody," Schroeder said. "Here people just came up and introduced themselves." Toby said.

Kerstin Lehmann came from Berlin. She was involved with student government, FORSCO, and girls cross country. When asked if she would come back to the United States if given a chance, Kerstin said, "Yes, I think I would come back to visit my host family, two little sisters, and, of course, all of my friends in New Castle."

Cristiana Scanu was the exchange student from Italy. She is involved with FORSCO, science club, student government and chamber ensemble. Cristiana said she couldn't believe how much people in the United States depend on their cars.

Alberto Alonzo journeyed to New Castle from Mexico. Alberto quickly became a successful member of the NCCHS swim team. He said that since he lives near the Mexican/Texas border, he has visited the United States often.

Students look to peers for guidance

A new program was formed at NCCHS this year. The program, Peer Facilitation, met each day during fifth hour.

Students for this program were chosen based on referrals made by high school teachers. Peers were chosen based upon their concern for others, listening skills, self confidence, dependability, honesty, attendance, potential for leadership, and ability to get along with others.

Peer Facilitation began during the first semester with intense training that included guest speakers, reading from an instruction book and role playing. This taught the facilitators more about themselves and how to communicate with others.

Janet Harvey, guidance counselor, taught the class. She said she had a very positive outlook about this program during its pilot year at NCCHS. "I believe peers trust other peers" Harvey said.

During the second semester the facilitators began to work with referrals from Sunnyside and Wilbur Wright Elementary Schools. The facilitators were referred to a child as special friends or as tutors. They visited the students at school to talk with them on a one-on-one basis.

The facilitators were trained to handle a variety of situations. They discussed school activities, problems, or just life in general.

For the most part, the facilitators seemed to like their new responsibilities. "Peer facilitation gave me a chance to learn more about myself and how to relate to others better," senior Wendy Snell said.

Academics

Making the grade

It's no secret that students were required to take classes during their tenure at NCCHS.

Some classes, such as English and U.S. History were mandated by the State Department of Education. Other courses were offered, however, which allowed students freedom to choose from a variety of areas.

There were basically three tracks of courses that students could follow. One path allowed students with special needs to take classes which offered more help. A second route offered challenging classes for college-bound students. Students who were unsure of their futures could take a third

Groce photo

See what you know...Testing is a part of academics that students often dread. Mr. Meyer, as well as all teachers, use test scores to measure student learning in a particular area, such as social studies.

track of classes - the noncollege-bound courses.

Mr. Rogers introduced a new course to the science curriculum this year. The class, which was an elective, studied the four major branches of philosophy: logic, ethics, aesthetics and metaphysics.

A couple of the more controversial, but popular areas of discussion in the class were abortion and genetic engineering.

"Being a part of the first philosophy of science class in the state of Indiana was an honor," senior John Singleton said.

"Philosophy of science tests the bounds of reality and challenges you to be a more critical thinker," senior Collin Asberry added.

"It was an interesting class," Adam Lewis said, "and I encourage the underclassmen to take it."

The variety of classes, along with the 7-period day, made getting the 42 credits necessary for graduation both easy and interesting.

Students find success

There was a lot of hoop- la in the special needs department this year.

Along with learning academic and living skills, students in Mrs. Hobbs' classes caught the Trojan spirit this year. They showed their sup- port by creating colorful designs on paper. The paper was then attached to the "hoop" that the Trojan varsity basketball players ran through as they entered the floor of the fieldhouse for each game.

The major portion of classtime, however, was spent on academic and living skills. Students studied a variety of topics, from English and math to tax form prepa- ration and cooking. Anyone who walked through the hallway on the bottom floor on cooking days could usually smell the tasty treats being prepared by Mrs. Hobbs' classes.

Finally finished...Leroy Perkins hopes he has done his assignment correctly.

More than meets the eye

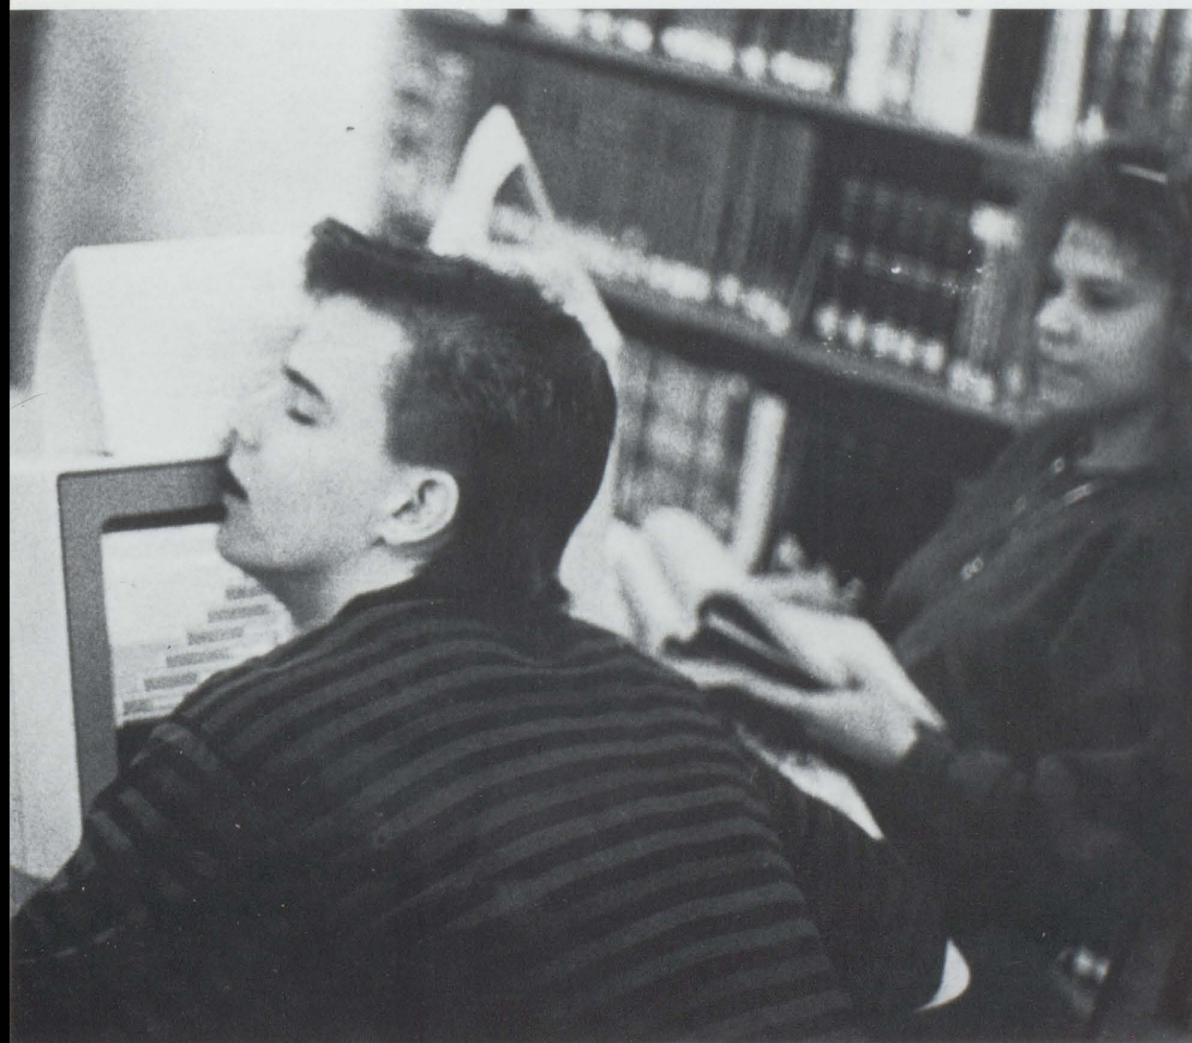

When someone mentions the words "English class", most people think of reading books and short stories and writing research papers and perfect paragraphs. One look at the English curriculum shows that there is much more going on in the department.

Listening skills, Parliamentary Procedure, public speaking, nonverbal communication and job communications are all part of the English requirements. Teachers also spend a lot of time teaching students to appreciate their language through writing and reading.

"I would have to say that my favorite part of English is writing poetry and reading," junior Shondae Ferrell said.

Students were never without work, since independent reading was an important part of most English classes.

Math solves problems

Anyone who took a math class this year could probably be called an expert problem solver - a math problem solver, that is.

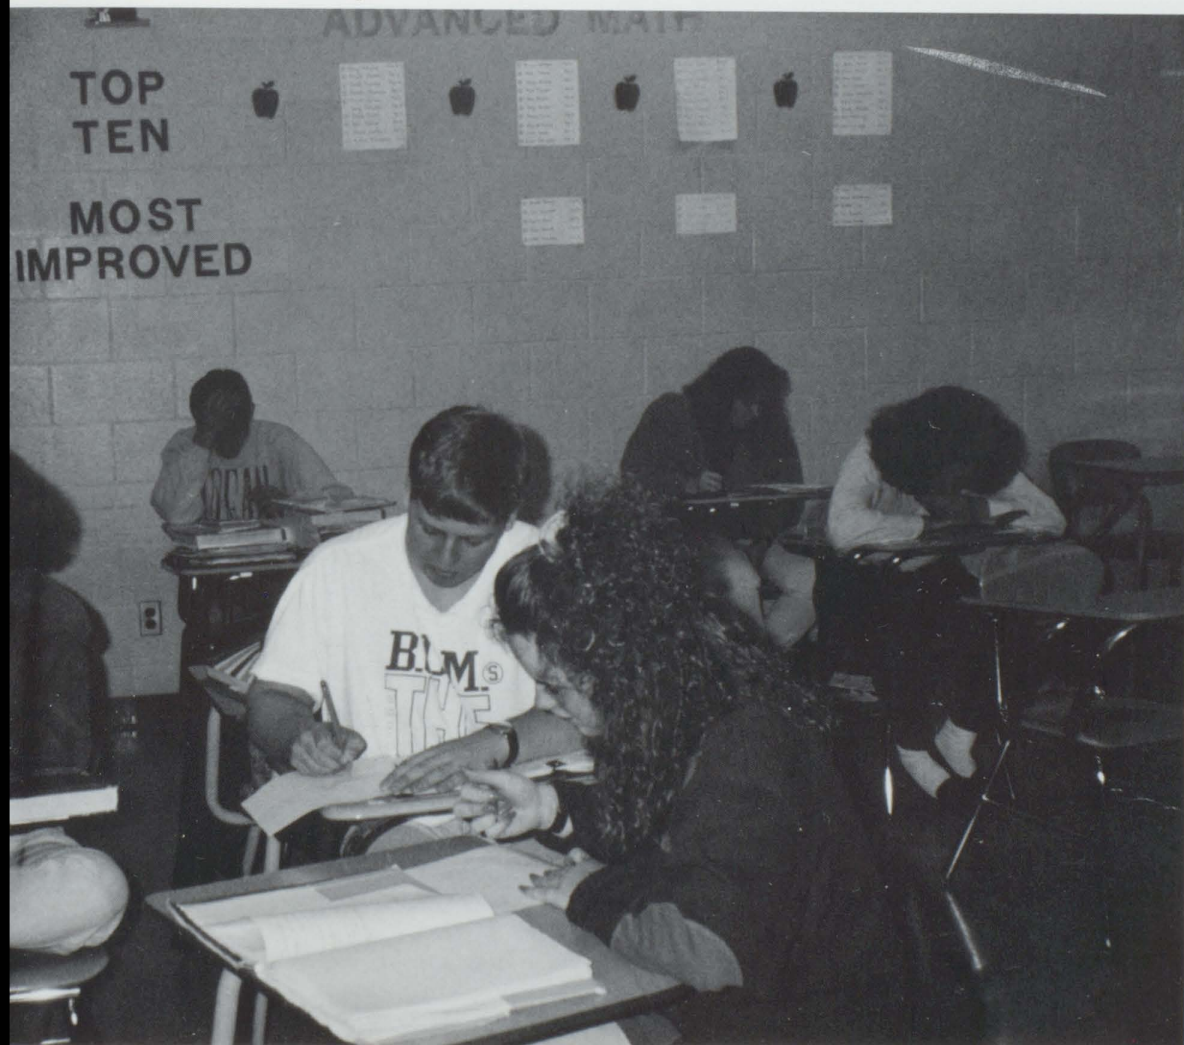

A variety of math classes offered students the opportunity to brush up on their basic skills, practice advanced computations, and apply their theories and calculations to daily living.

Solving problems became more than every day homework, though.

It was also one of the only ways of earning extra credit points for math classes.

Several times throughout the year the math league contest offered a math problem for students to solve. Students who correctly identified the answer could earn extra credit.

"I enjoy math because it helps me to prepare for my upcoming years in college," junior Brett Edstene said."

Science finds the answers

Anyone who thinks science is dull apparently has not visited the science department at NCCHS lately. Teachers with diverse backgrounds and experiences challenged students to look at the world in new ways.

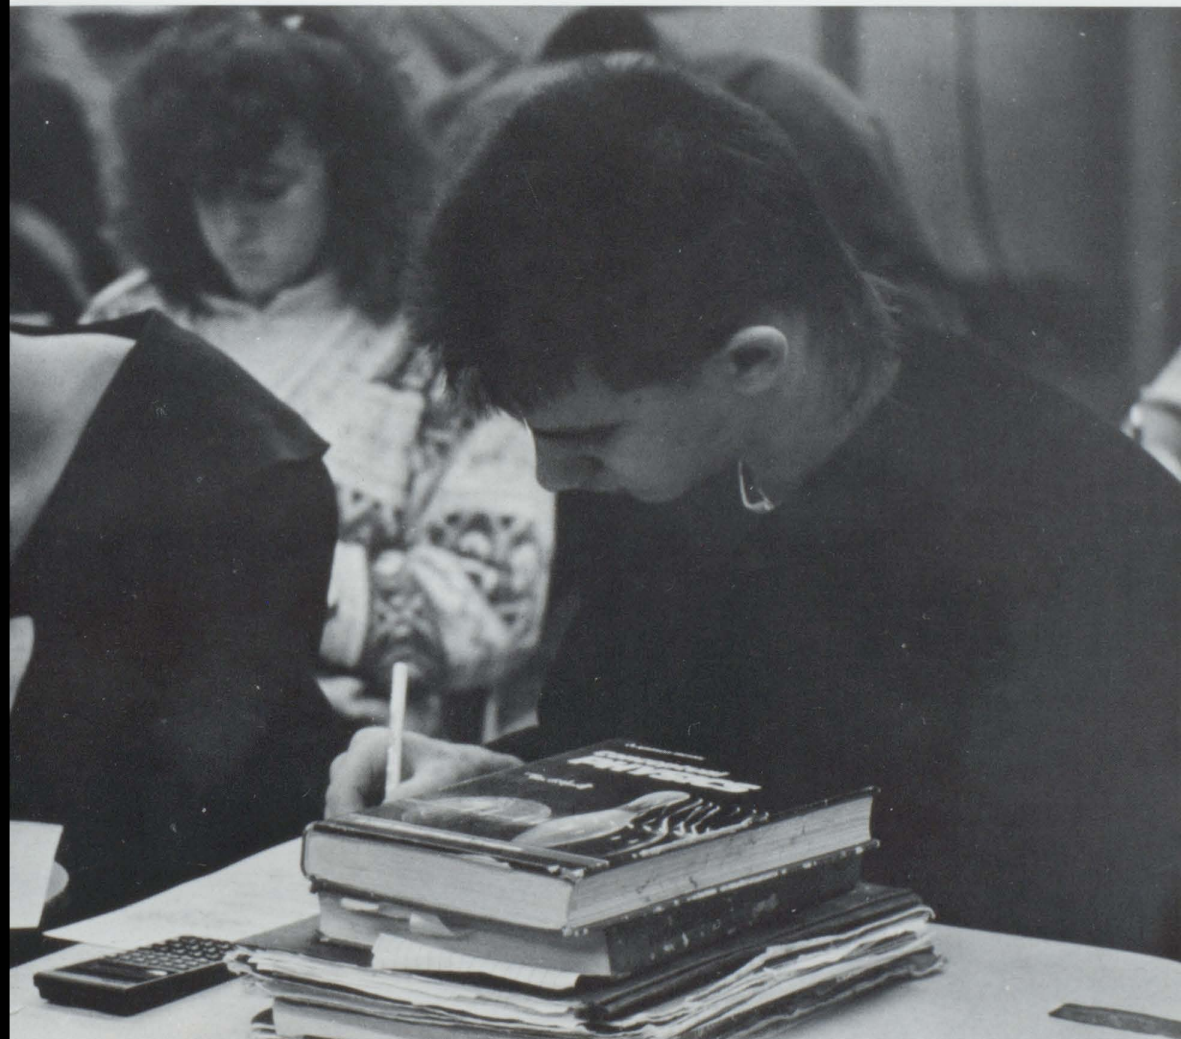

A new class was added to the science curriculum this year. Mr. Rogers developed and taught "Philosophy of Science", the only class like it in Indiana. Students in the class were encouraged to think about a variety of life and death issues.

Chemistry teacher John Thompson returned to NCCHS this fall with new-found knowledge about "Warm Core Ed-dies". During the summer he attended a five-week workshop in Massachusetts, where he studied both the land and the sea.

"It was great working with other teachers and learning a lot of new ideas," Thompson said.

Focus on the world

Politics, recession, and the quality of living were issues that made headlines in the newspapers this year, and the social studies department at NCCHS seized the opportunity to study these issues and more.

As the Presidential candidates prepared their campaigns and entered the political race, government classes were able to follow the progress of the primaries.

"The most important thing I learned in government was to vote Republican," senior JaMarc Neeley joked.

State senator Beverly Gard also visited NCCHS to answer questions.

The economy and the anatomy of business was also an important topic of study, especially for the Junior Achievement classes. Students in JA classes built businesses, then marketed products such as stuffed animals and flowers.

Learning another language is fun, but it takes a lot of work to master it, as students in the foreign language department know all too well.

Three languages other than English were offered at NCCHS this year. The most popular class seemed to be Spanish. Barbara Acosta Sorrell and Dwight Frazee brought the spirit of Spanish-speaking countries to NCCHS.

French and German classes were also offered to interested students. Stephanie Vanderleest taught the French classes, while Richard Kinnaird taught German.

According to Sorrell, foreign language classes taught students more than just the definitions of words. While the classes began with simple alphabet and vocabulary work, they quickly worked into studies of conversation and cultures of the lands.

Many NCCHS students took business into their own hands when they enrolled in a course offered by the business department.

Courses such as business law, accounting and keyboarding taught students the skills needed for professional careers in the business field.

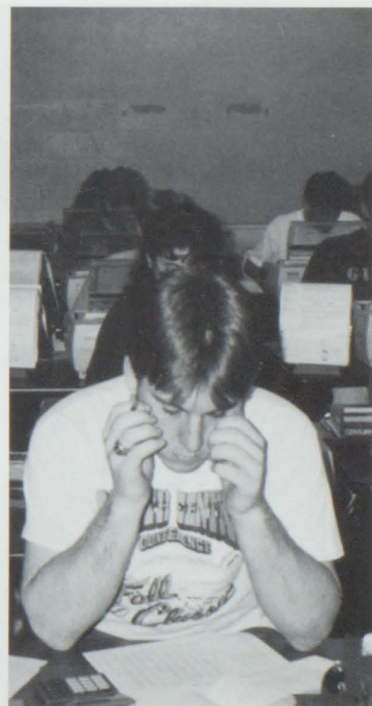

"These days anyone who wants to work needs experience in business," business department chairperson Nancy Oakes said.

Students enrolled in business soon found out that there was more to business than just typing.

Appearance is important in the office. Students learned that professionalism is shown not only through skills, but also through manners and appearance.

Computer skills were stressed, also, since technology has reached most offices.

Technology was the foundation for the Industrial Arts program this year. Terms such as CAD and ICT became commonplace in the vocabularies of many industrial arts students.

Computers led the way in Computer-Aided Drafting (CAD) class this year. Students enrolled in this class transferred their drafting skills from the drawing board to the keyboard.

"You can do the same things you do on the drafting board," senior Gary Davidson said, "but with CAD you can do it faster and better."

Industrial arts classes differed from most other classes offered at NCCHS in that students were able to gain hands-on experience in an area and see results of their efforts through their projects. Students were able to enjoy the furniture, photos and other objects they made in class.

Learning was living in the home ec. department. The curriculum focused on teaching students skills from cooking to clothing to family living.

Students in the foods classes made a variety of foods. On several occasions they were able to test their culinary creations on outside sources.

Not only did they serve refreshments at Back-To-School Night, but they also served the traditional Christmas breakfast buffet.

All of the work was not confined to the classroom, though. NCCHS was represented at the state convention and at the Decorator's Show Home display in Indianapolis.

Creative juices flow

When the word "art" is mentioned, many students picture a class full of pupils with easels in front of them and paint brushes in hand. Any student who has taken an art class, however, knows that there is much more to creating artistic projects than meets the eye.

According to art teacher Marcia Conway, the focus of art is not only to teach the studio process, but to also incorporate art history, production, criticism and aesthetics into the class.

Conway said that both she and art teacher Diane Slabaugh taught students how to process ideas creatively, how to manipulate the various artistic media, and how to make judgments about art.

"I like art classes because they let me express myself," junior Shondae Ferrell said.

Physical education, health and driver education classes all had something in common: they helped students to get around, either by increasing their strength and endurance, by teaching students to keep their bodies healthy and in shape, or by teaching them to operate a moving vehicle.

Many activities were used in the phys. ed. classes to promote good physical health. Running, weightlifting, and playing games such as softball and volleyball gave students the chance to exercise and to have fun at the same time.

During driver education class, students went from cruising the parking lots of NCHS to zipping down the city streets, the county roads, and the interstate. Students studied in the classroom two days each week, drove once a week and had study hall for two days.

Working in the real world

Learning skills that apply to real life became an everyday affair for students in vocational classes.

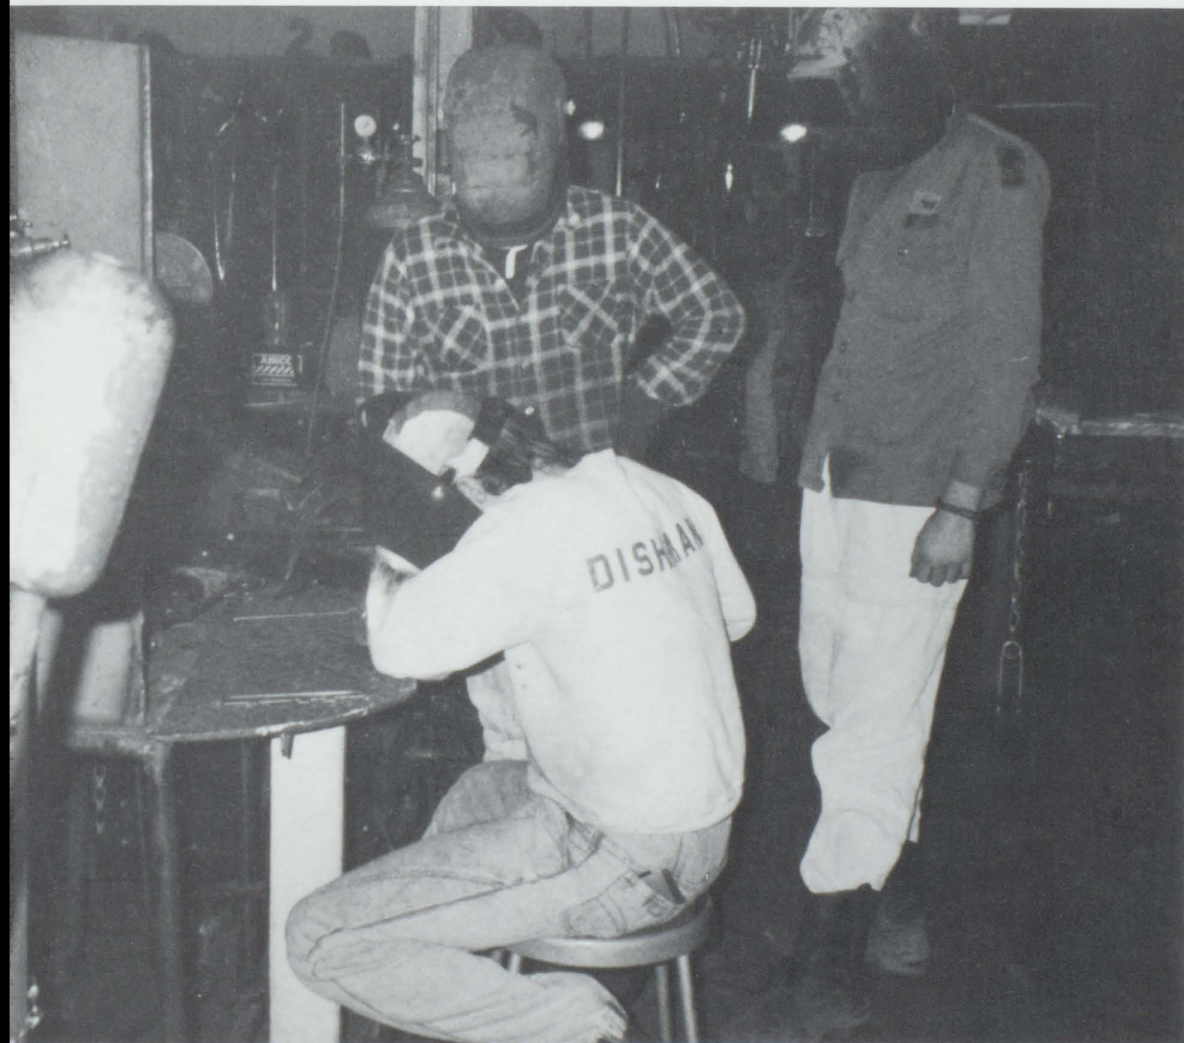

From cleaning teeth to welding metals to constructing buildings to caring for children, students learned skills and work ethics that they could use in the future.

Students enrolled in vocational child care classes actually spent time caring for small children.

"Children are wonderful," senior Tracy Lovett said. "Treat them that way."

In the welding room, students learned the proper techniques and safety requirements for connecting metal. The class provided an opportunity for experience in handling equipment.

"Vocational welding - the place where men are made," is the label given by welding instructor Jan Conway.

Music to the ears

The NCCHS bands were busy this year, performing both marching and concert shows.

Throughout the summer, members of the marching band spent many hours rehearsing for their field show. The long hours of dedication paid off, as the group placed among the top bands in many competitions and narrowly missed a trip to the state finals at the Hoosier Dome.

The marching band then had a rest during the winter months, but geared up in the spring to march in the Hardee's Indianapolis 500 Parade.

"Being a member of such a successful band is really a lot of fun," sophomore Matt Scott said, "but it's also a lot of hard work."

Between marching seasons, band members broke into concert band and ensembles.

The NCCHS choirs were sweet music to the ears of those who heard them this year. Under the direction of Mrs. Jalean Addington, the choirs performed on several different occasions, including at the Achievement Day convocation and at other events.

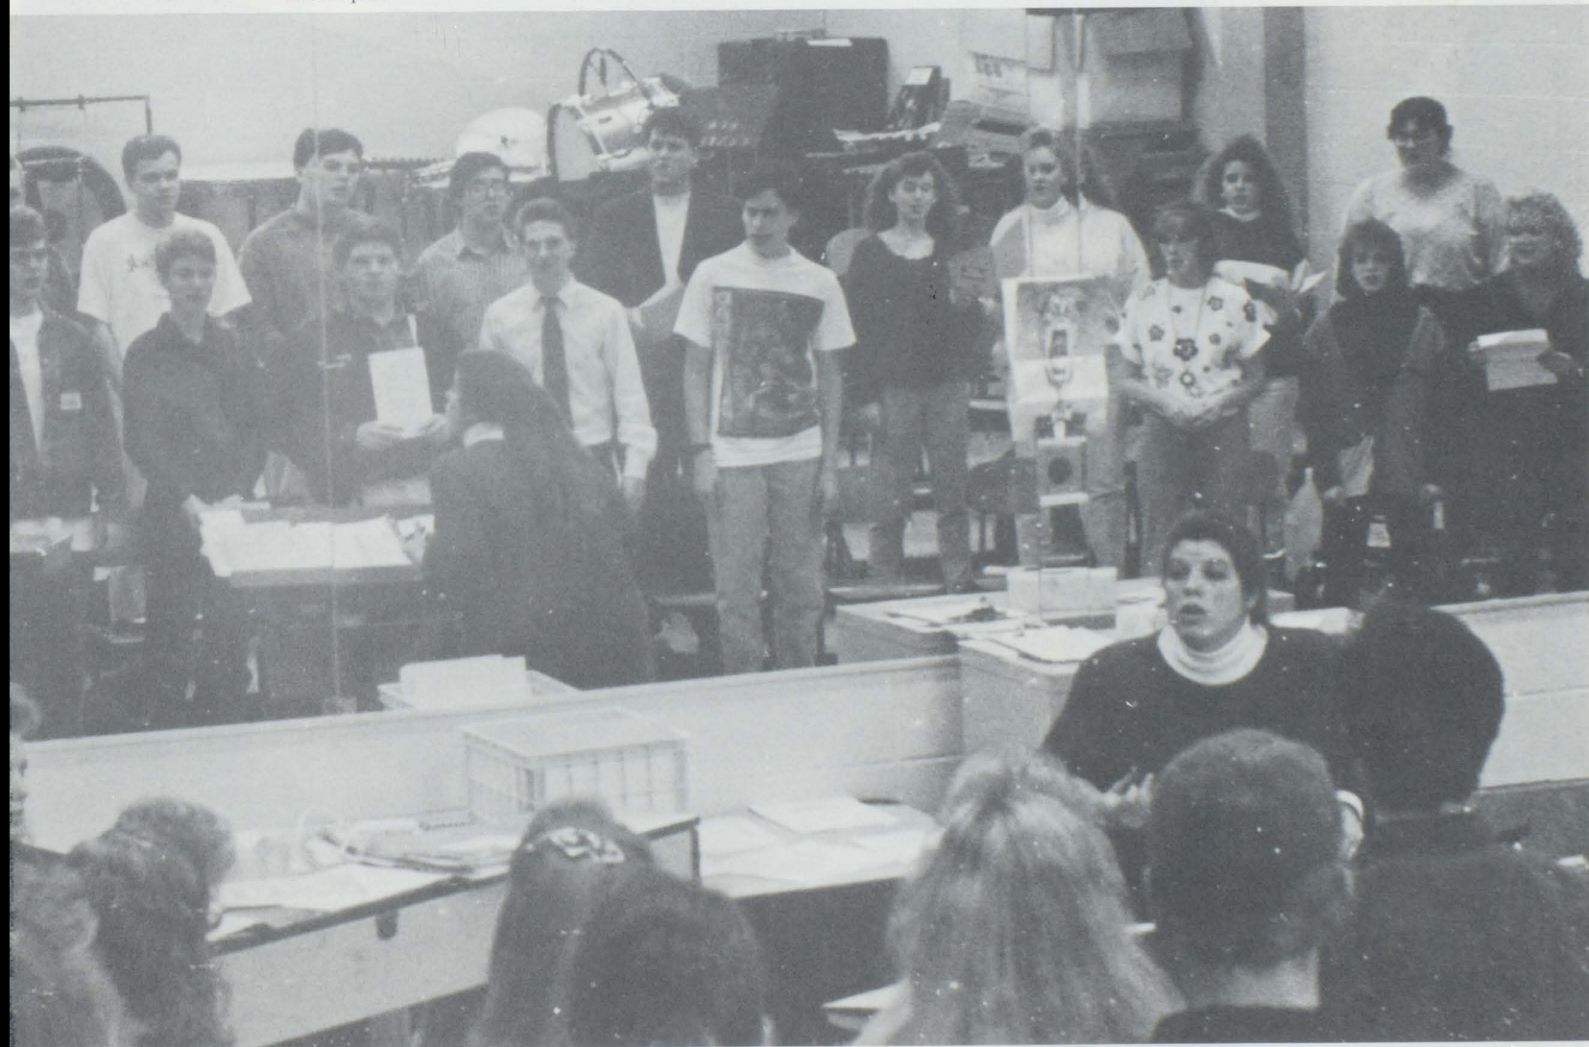

Choir students also competed in contests, both as individuals and as group choirs.

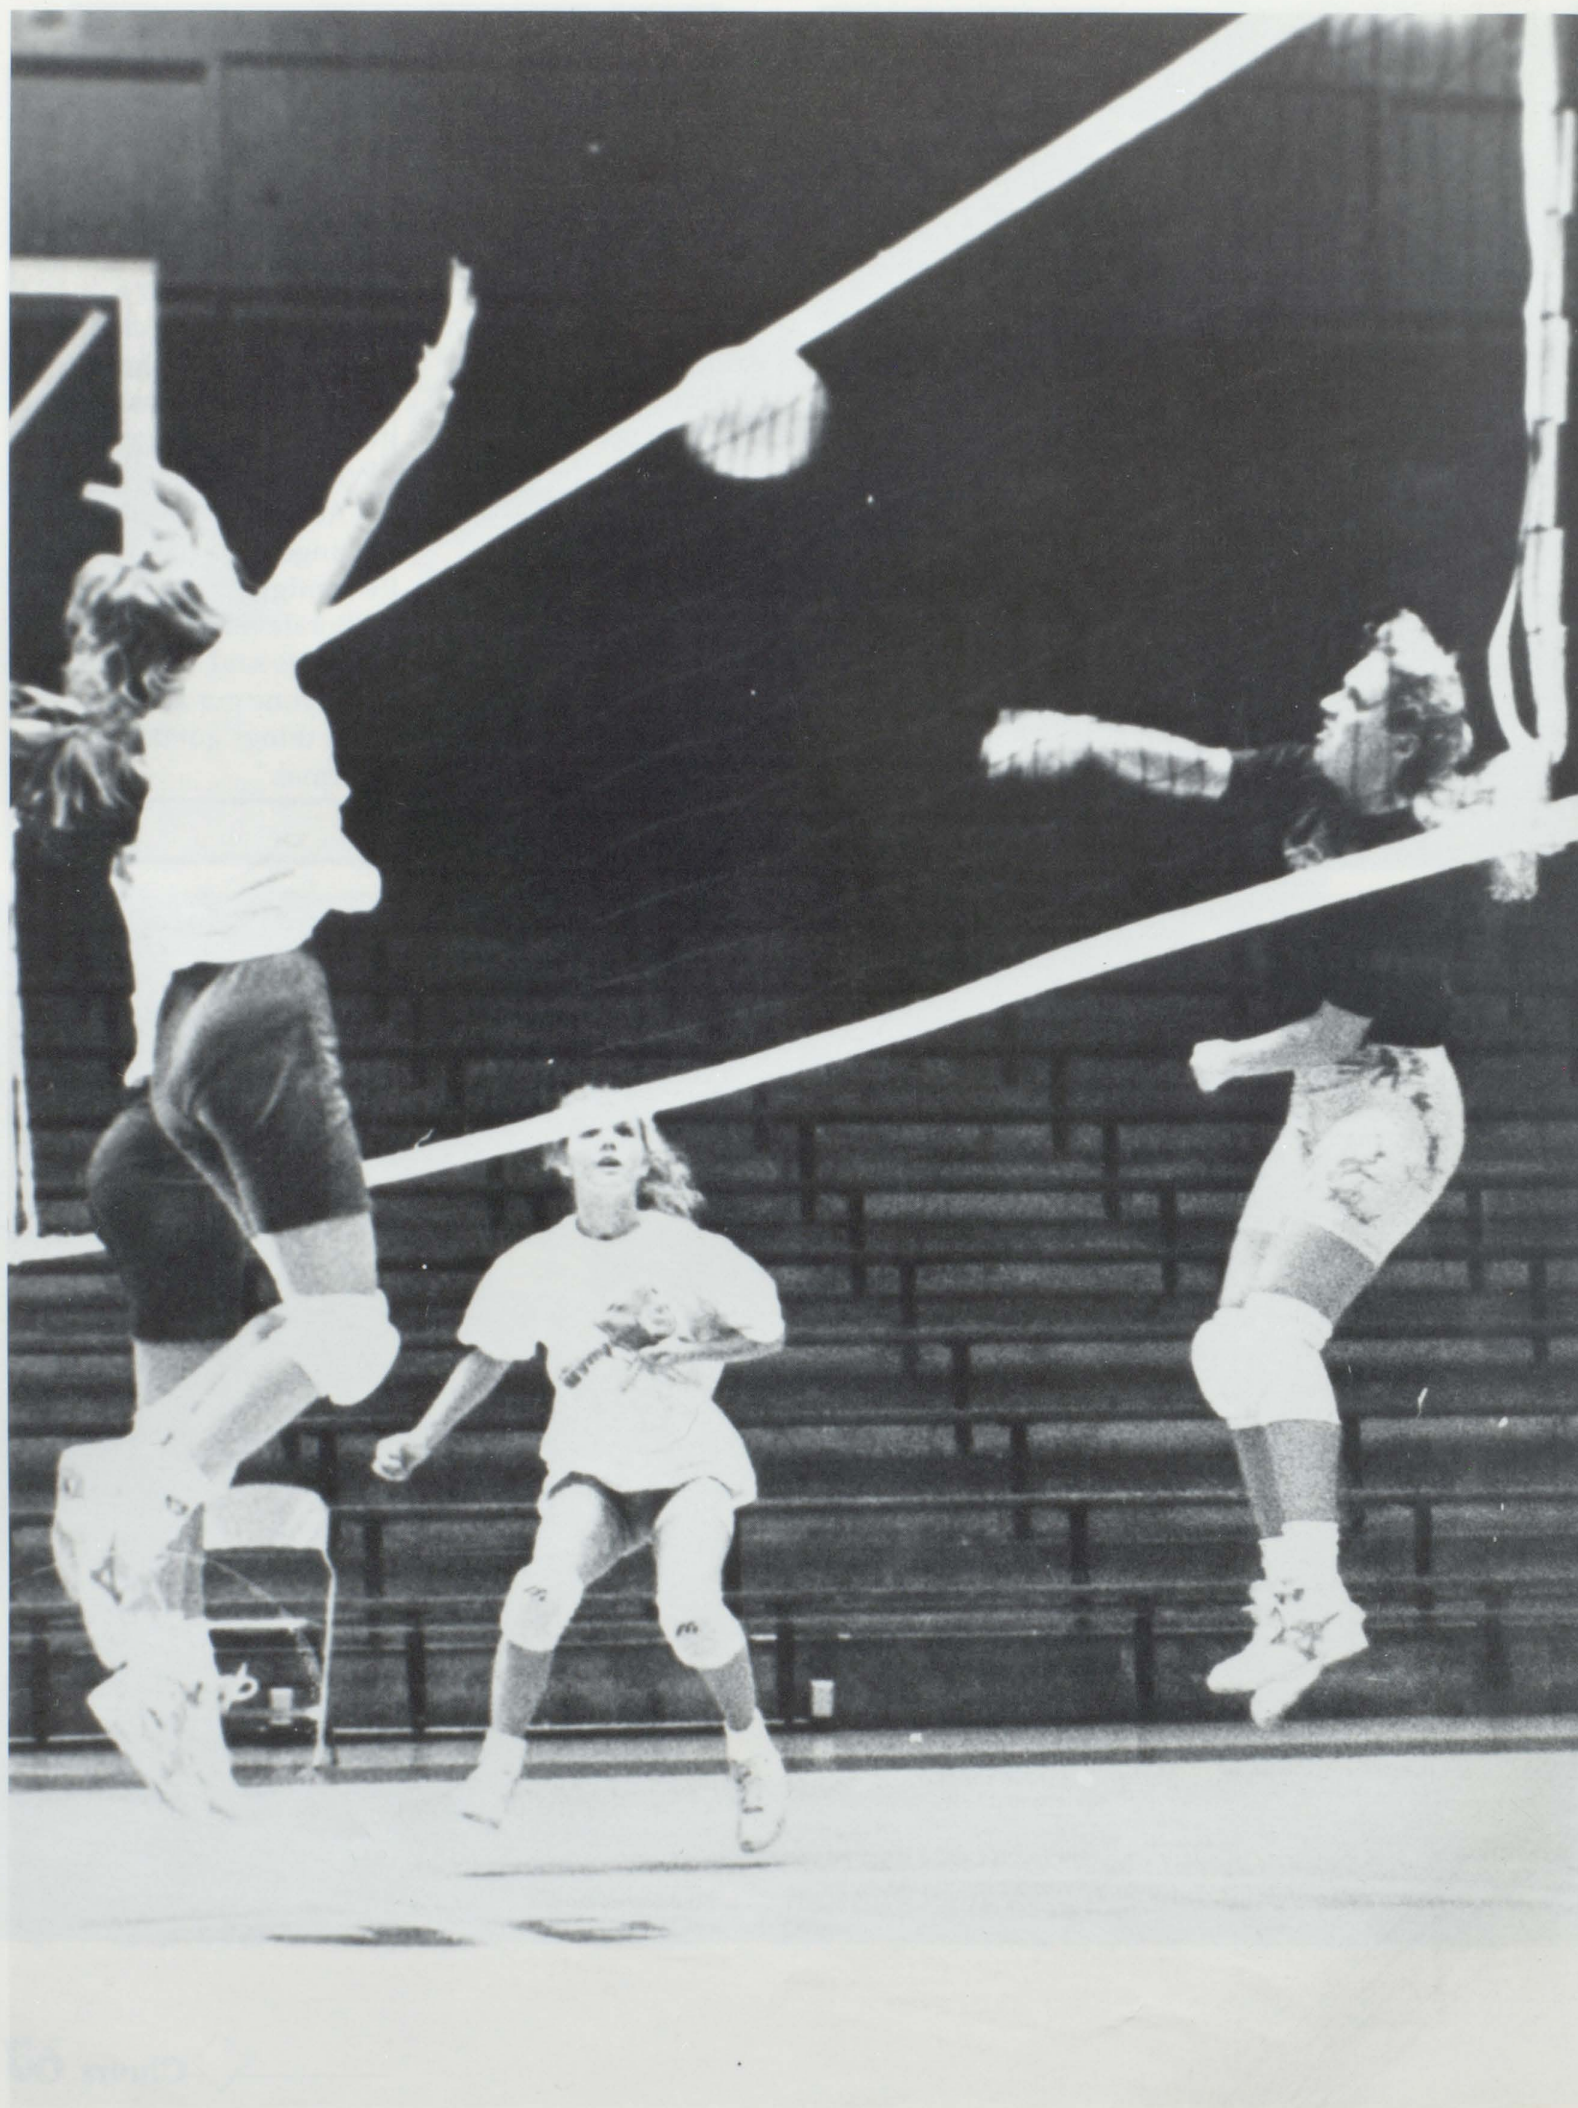

Midway through the year, choir students had to make a minor adjustment in their daily routine. When Mrs. Addington left school for a maternity leave, choir students found themselves with a substitute teacher, Miss Dana Winkler.

"At first it was a big change changing teachers overnight," sophomore Chorale member Anna Rhodes said, "but soon everyone got adjusted, and things got back to normal."

Athletics

Same games, new names

As another year of school went by, so did a year of high school athletics. Sports was something most of the students looked forward to, whether they were participating as athletes or just being fans.

Approximately 200 students from NCCHS participated in high school athletics. Some of the athletes use high school to improve their chances of playing their respective sports in college. Many, however, were lured into participating by the challenge of competition and fun.

and death situation. Sometimes teams have to use a year to rebuild. This year was a whole new ball-game for many teams as new athletes became involved in sports.

But as always, the New Castle athletic squads seemed to give 100% every time they hit the court, took the field, or dove in the pool.

"Our team may not have had all the success in the world," senior tennis team member Brian Graham said, "but we had fun every time we played."

In many ways, athletics lends itself to developing a well-rounded person. Not only do athletes showcase their talents during a game, but they also must display qualities such as leadership, common sense and patience. Athletes learn to work as a team, to be competitive, to be gracious winners and losers.

After all, "it's not whether you win or lose; it's how you play the game."

Tough season brings experience

Even though the Trojan finished their season at 1 and 8, they had many outstanding moments.

The highlight of the season was a 35 to 6 thrashing of the Logansport Berries. Against the Berries the Trojan offense and defense was in sync. The Trojan offense rushed for 270 yards while freshmen Wally Logan rushed for 159 yards. The Trojan defense held the Berries to 55 yards on the ground.

Another highlight for the Trojans was playing in the Hoosier Dome. "Playing in the Hoosier Dome for the first time was a painful but yet an awesome experience because of the astroturf and the size of the Hoosier Dome," junior line-backer Erin Widner said. The Trojans lost the game 42 to 12 to Laffayette Jeff.

Even though the Trojans were placed in the 4A class instead of 5A as in the past, the Trojans still had to compete in the always strong North Central Conference.

"I don't think the record this season showed how well we played and how good we really were," senior wide receiver Ryan Nicholson said.

The Trojans had

Central Conference. They were seniors Wade Hamilton, Ryan Nicholson, and John Singleton. Hamilton was also named first team All-State by the Associated Press as tight end.

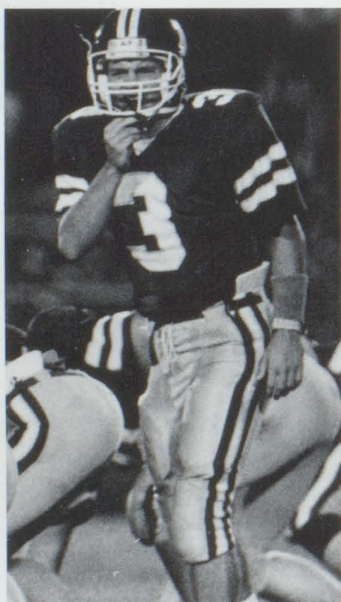

"It was a really great feeling being named to the first team All-State," senior Hamilton said. Also, Nicholson and Singleton were named to the Honorable Mention All-State team.

"Our numbers were disappointing, but the team improved throughout the whole year, and we had a great group of seniors who be missed next year," coach Mark Hughes said. "Many young players received a lot of experience which will help for the future."

Sectional crown caps winning season

The Trojan Spikers ended the year with a record of 24-13. They also won Sectional by beating Shenandoah, Knightstown, and Tri, capping off their fourth straight Sectional crown.

Through a grueling 37 match season, the Trojans showed poise, confidence and team work. Coach Penny Bowman credits this to a long hard summer of dedication and good senior leadership.

"The 1991 volleyball team went far beyond people's expectations for the year," she said. "We played hard, and everyone contributed in their own way."

Bowman said that the keys to the team's success were work ethics, teamwork, leadership, and desire.

Stephanie Beavers, Amy Overton, Cari Supinger, and Jennifer Haskett played important roles on the team.

"The seniors showed great leadership and encouraged everyone to improve their game,"

Bowman said.

Co-captains Beavers and Overton were also named all-

"The main reason for our success was that we played as a team," Beavers said. "We didn't have one star player; we were one unit, and we played great together."

Not only was Beavers all-NCC, she was named the teams's most versatile and received the good sportsmanship award.

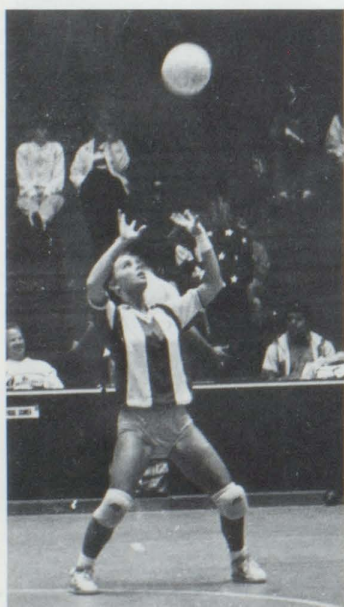

Junior Kim Snell led the team in digs (145) and highest serving percentage (91.9%). Junior Lainie Butler was named most improved. Sophomore Monica Liette led kill efficiency at .244 and 48 block solos, and junior Kelli Roop led the team in assists with 508.

"It has been a great pleasure to coach these ten girls throughout the year," Bowman said. "Even with the loss of four seniors, the future looks bright."

Netters see new faces

Trojan tennis coach John Burdsall knew going into the season that this would be a rebuilding year. After losing six players from last year's team, the varsity lacked the experience needed to compete against the tough schedule that they faced.

The varsity team finished the season with a 6-9 record. They placed sixth in the North Central Conference meet. The junior varsity went 8-3.

The Trojans faced many top twenty teams including eventual state champion Marion. According to Burdsall, the most thrilling win for the netters was against arch rival Connersville.

One burden for the Trojans was that this was the first varsity experience for most of the team.

Six seniors provided leadership for the team, including co-captains Chris Bertram and Chris Huntley. Other seniors were Collin Asberry, Brian Graham, Scott Johnson, and Cary Solida. "Beating Connersville felt great," senior Brian Graham said.

"The sparks of the team would have to be the three singles players," Burdsall said, "Chris Huntley, Chris Bertram, and Brian Graham played 1, 2, and 3 singles respectfully all year."

He added, "They were very consistent all year and improved match by match."

Huntley was the only Trojan to advance to the regional after the team suffered a disappointing loss against Knightstown in the sectional.

"It was exciting advancing to the regional," Huntley said, "but I would have rather gone as a team."

At the fall sports awards program, Bertram was named Most Valuable Varsity Player. Huntley was cited as the Most Improved Varsity Player. The Bill Walker Mental Attitude Award went to Graham.

Junior Whitney Blattner received recognition as the junior varsity tourney winner. Curt Huntley was named Most Improved JV player.

Experience speaks for itself

The girls golf team had a tremendous year, completing an undefeated regular season and winning the sectional. Members of this year's varsity team were seniors Lorrie Culver, Heather Heck and Debra Wooten; junior Darci Harrold; sophomore Laura Veach; and freshman Ellen Bishop.

Bishop was a major contributor to the success of this year's team. She was the individual medalist at Conference and Sectional.

"It was a great feeling and experience to advance to the State finals as a freshman," she said.

Wooten also was medalist several times during the year. She contributed in the Sectional by placing 2nd medalist.

"Being a senior this year, it was really great to be part of a winning team," said Wooten.

Culver had some bad days but she always came back. She was the medalist for the team at least once this year. "This year was the best we've ever had, but it should have been a lot better," she said. "I'm still really happy with our season, and I'm glad we won sectional." Harrold was consistent. The team could always count on her to bring in a respectable score.

"I enjoyed being part of a winning team, and I look forward to next year."

Veach had some outstanding outings this year also.

Even though Heck did not see much varsity action, she was always there to give support.

The team, which was consistently ranked among the top teams in the state, learned the meaning of teamwork. "Although the individual scores are important in golf, we all came together as a team," Wooten said.

Although the girls wanted to win the NCC and advance the entire team to the state finals, they always knew that Coach Dorr was behind them. His motto, "No matter if you win or lose, you're still number one in my eyes," was with them throughout the good and the bad times.

Rise and Shine....The girls golf team prepares for an early practice.

And they're off and running

The boys and girls cross country teams ran their way to a winning season. They met their challenges head on through blood, sweat, and tears.

Senior runner Jolin Link was New Castle's first four year letter winner for the girls cross country team.

"Even though this was my 'off season', I thought as a team we did great," Link said. "Coach Smith and the team made it a great season, and I wish them all the luck next year."

Sophomore Angella Wiggins led the way for the Lady Trojans with freshman Jenny Massen-gale following close behind. Wiggins broke the school record and was the only team member to advance to Semi-State.

"None of my accomplishments could have been achieved without everyone contributing to the team," Wiggins said.

Brett Smith coached the girls cross country team.

This year's boys team was led by the "fearsome foursome" consisting of Ryan Cassidy, Robert Stewart, Chad McRoberts and Mark Brock. These four runners took turns finishing first for the team, and they usually finished within 30 seconds of each other.

"This was the key to the success of the team," Coach Dave Pryor said.

The lady runners ended their season with an 8-4 record. The male runners ended the season at 12-1, including an advancement to Semi-State.

"This year was a better year than last year for me personally," sophomore Anna Rhodes said. "I improved my time by several minutes."

"We had a good winning season," she continued. "We didn't quite reach all of our goals, but we're happy with the way things turned out."

"This was a most enjoyable season for me," senior Ryan Cassidy said. "Enjoyable, exciting, and satisfying."

Seniors lead winning season

"It was what I expected," Girls Swim Coach Jennifer Marquess said. "We were in a team-rebuilding year." The girls finished with a 6 win and a 5 loss record.

The seniors made up much of the line-up for the Trojans, and it produced winners.

"This year was a good experience for the girls because the kids were able to switch around and swim some events they normally don't swim," Marquess said.

Senior Chris Garczewski was successful in moving from one event to another. She placed in the top six at Sectionals with a lifetime best.

"One of my greatest accomplishments was placing in the top six at Sectional in back-stroke, because this was my first year swimming in that event," Garczewski said.

"Also, I cut off 20 seconds from the beginning of the season in the 500 back-stroke," she added.

Emily Matthews placed in the top 12 at Sectional in the 200 and 500 freestyles, with a personal best in both events.

"I felt that our team did well, considering all of the young swimmers we had," she said.

Senior Pam Lundy also had a great year, considering she had a near life-threatening injury the year before.

Shelley Ondercin placed in the top 12 in the 50 and 100 freestyles at Sectional, with a personal best in the 100

Perhaps New Castle's best time was turned in by the 200 relay team of Garczewski, freshman Joni Grimes, Ondercin, and sophomore Nicole Sidwell.

Several other swimmers also had personal bests this season. Junior Jackie Bowers had an outstanding year in diving, as did Jennifer Cole in the 200 freestyle, Megan Painter in the 200IM, Cindy Sims and Christy Copenhaver in the 50 free, Jessica Groves in the 100 free, and Nicole Sidwell and Emily Matthews in the 500 free.

Trojans survive tough season

According to Coach Sam Alford, this season "was not the typical Trojan year, but still one that had many enjoyable moments."

The Trojans had a relatively young squad, with only three seniors. Add to that the fact that two freshmen saw several minutes of varsity action, and it became apparent that the Trojans were definitely rebuilding.

The season opened with a convincing victory over county rival Knightstown. The celebration soon ended, though, when the Trojans met a lineup of tough teams, including Mt. Vernon, Richmond, Greenfield, Muncie South, Anderson Highland, Madison Heights and Connersville.

Just when the Trojans needed a confidence boost, they recorded wins over Shenandoah and Jay County. The next three games, however, fell to rivals Shelbyville, Marion and Carmel.

A trip to Logansport was worth the ride as the team recorded its fourth victory of the season. Following a defeat by Muncie Central, the Trojans netted their final win of the regular season, this time over Rushville.

When tourney time rolled around, the Trojans found themselves in a unique position, hosting a sectional of teams who all had sub-par regular season performances. After winning the title, the Trojans were bumped from the regional field by eventual winner Richmond.

Although the record was not spotless, there were some bright spots. The sectional win was the fifth straight title for the Trojans. Also, many underclassmen posted playing time, gaining knowledge of the game for future seasons.

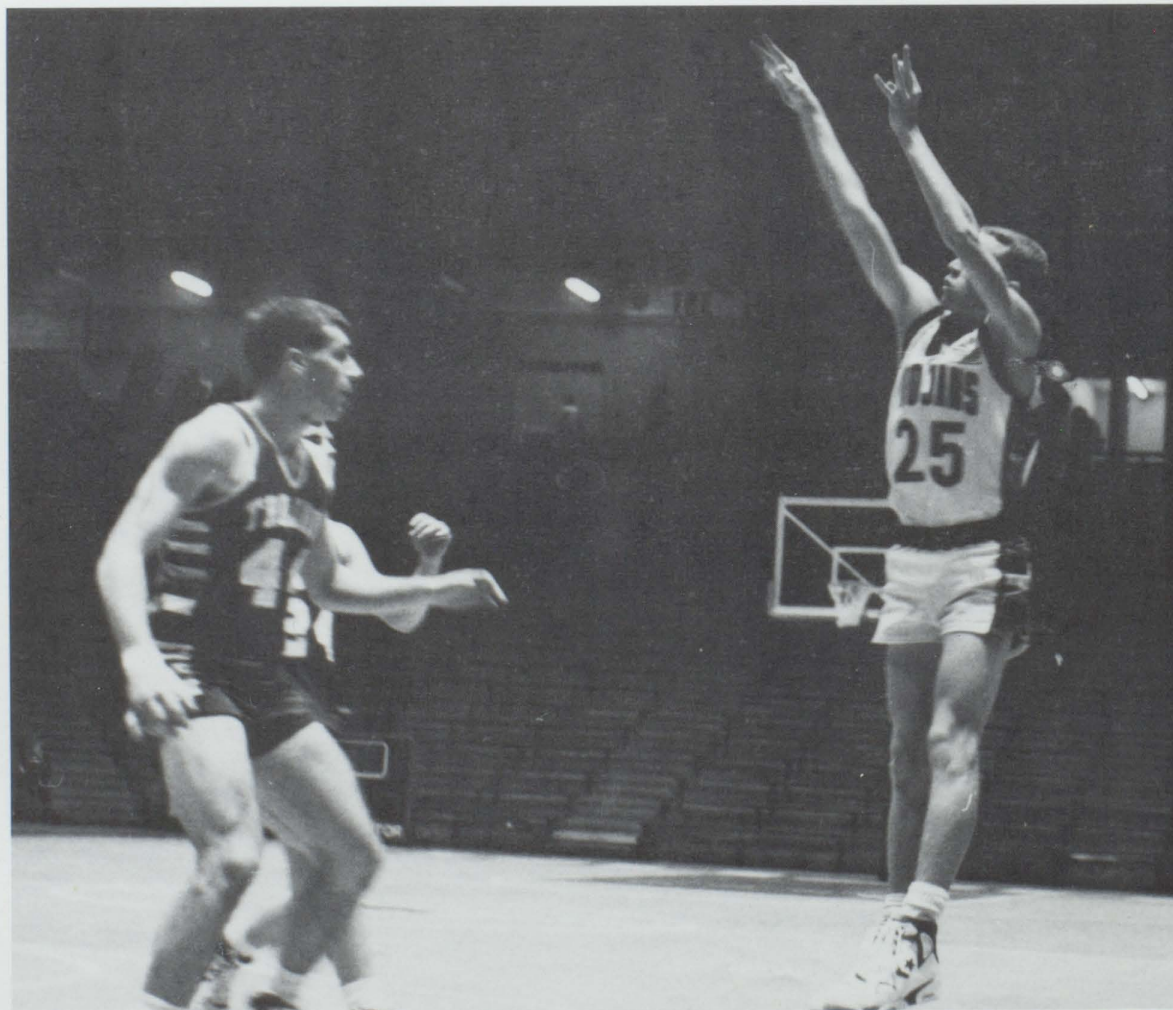

"The benefits of this year will be apparent in the next three seasons," Alford said.

Lady Trojans score record season

The Lady Trojan basketball team started the season with high expectations. The Trojans, however, hit a road block early when possible starter Paula Miller went down with a knee injury. Although Miller was missed by the team, the Lady Trojans posted a 18-3 record, the best in New Castle history.

The ladies came out strong, winning their first two games before losing to Anderson Highland. The Trojans then ran off four more wins before running up to highly ranked Kokomo, who eventually won the NCC, and the state tournament. The Trojans had the Wildkats on the ropes before Kokomo put it away in the final seconds.

This year's Lady Trojans added many pages to the New Castle record book. Probably the most impressive was their 18-3 season record. They also changed the record book for most consecutive games won, winning 12 in a row.

"This group of young ladies was a team with a mission," second year coach Curt Bell said. "They were dedicated to being the best team they possibly could be." Other goals the Lady Trojans accomplished were winning their third straight sectional championship, compiling a 9-0 home record, and establishing a 6-1 conference record, which earned them a second place finish in the NCC.

New Castle also produced two All-North Central Conference players - Angie Porter and Shelley Morgan.

"We had an 18-3 record, the best the school has ever had, and we went unbeaten at home," Porter said. "I'm happy with that."

"I had the time of my life," Morgan added.

No holes in this lineup

When the wrestling season ended last season, Coach Rex Peckinpaugh had several holes in his lineup. When the season began this year, however, the holes had been filled.

The strength of this year's team was spread out among many participants. Senior Wade Hamilton ended the season with a 42-4 individual record (189 lb.). He ended his career with a school record 63 pins.

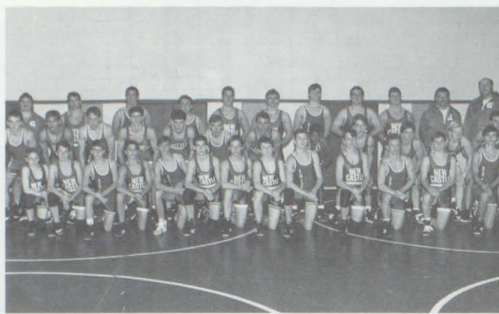

Hamilton and junior Ryan Hoots, brought home individual wins from the Adams Central Tournament, also.

Senior Chris Garrard

added his name to the record books, as he ended his career with 106 wins. He also became the only Trojan wrestler to earn four consecutive sectional wins.

One of the most pleasant surprises for Peckinpaugh was junior Mike Brown. Not only did he finish the season with a very respectable record of 38-8, but he also recorded the Trojans' only regional title. He then placed second in the hometown semi-state, making him the only NC matman to qualify for the state tournament.

"Without a doubt, the outstanding individual performance of the year was Mike Brown's wrestling in the regional and semi-state," Peckinpaugh said. "He proved that you get out of something what you put into it."

According to Peckinpaugh, the team highlight came when they won the tough NCC title for the second straight year. Five Trojans brought home NCC laurels, including junior Seth Farrell (103) sophomore Eric Motl (135), Garrard (145), sophomore Matt Fitzgerald (152), and Hamilton (189).

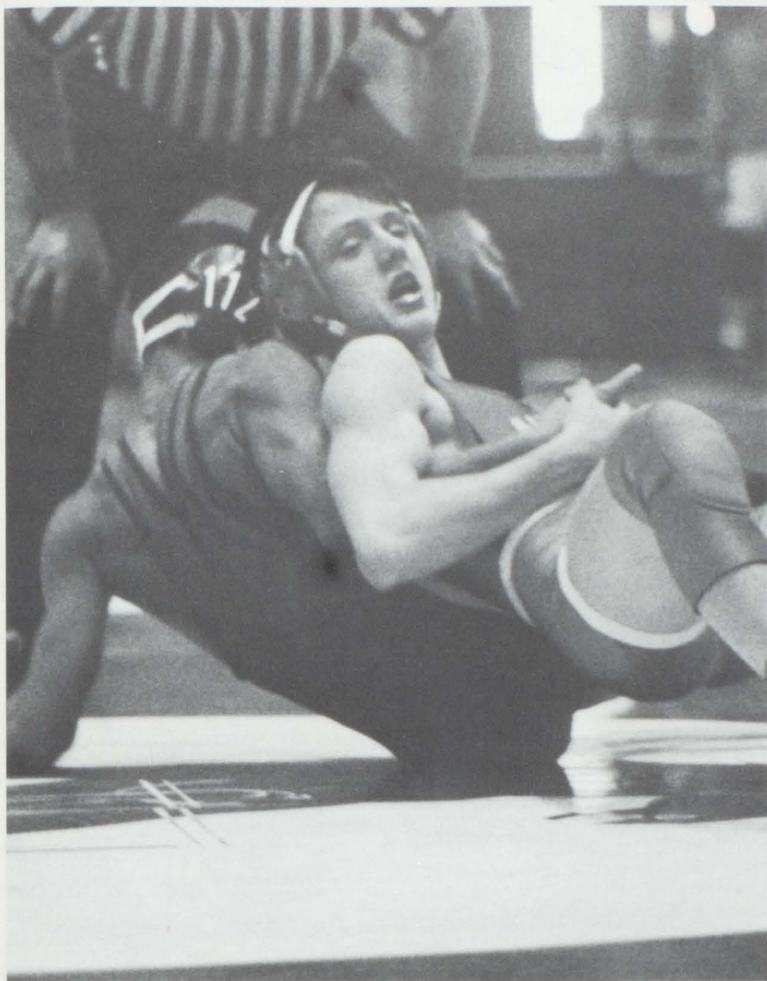

"As a team, the NCC Championship was certainly the highlight of the year," Peckinpaugh said.

The gymnastics team continued their way through another competitive season carrying no seniors, two juniors, six sophomores, and two freshman. Still, despite the youth, the team managed to end with 7-7 record and a third place finish in the NCC.

Leading the way for the Trojans was sophomore Raeanne Ballinger, who was the only regional qualifier. Her strength and versatility was shown in several areas, as she led the team in scoring in the all-around event, as well as in uneven bars, vault and floor. She tied for first

Swimmers find success at sectional

The New Castle boys swim team started slowly, but ended with a 4 win-10 loss dual meet season with only four returning swimmers

The high point of this year's team was the Richmond sectional. Exchange student Alberto Alonzo placed first in the 100 free and went on to place 7th in the state meet. He also placed 2nd in the 200 free and 10th at state, where he set a new school record in the 200 freestyle.

"For me the highest point of the season was the state meet," Alonzo said. "This meet was what I had been training all season for, and the competition of the other swimmers was tough."

The 200 medley relay team of Robert Beattey, Peter Thomsen, Alonzo, and Mark Dudley set a new school record, also. Beatty placed fourth at sectional in the 100 backstroke, just missing the state meet by 2 hundredths of a second. Beattey lowered his own school record by almost 3 seconds.

"Our team was a rebuilding team," Coach Marquess said. "Some swimmers started from scratch, and only a few had experience in competition.

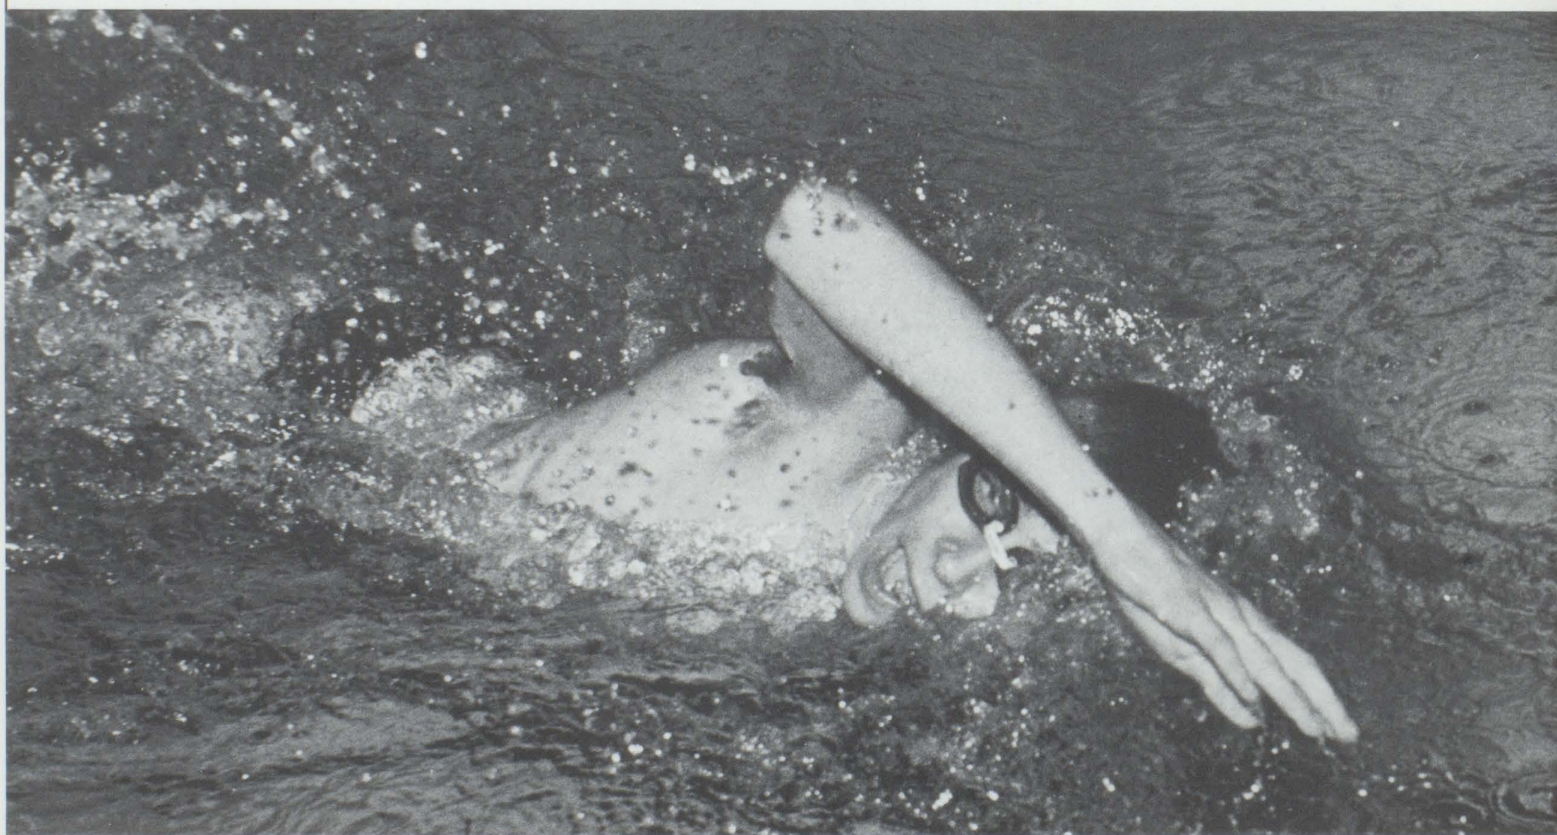

"We did pretty well and even though we were sometimes disappointed the final record was better than what I expected," she added.

Freshman Mark Dudley placed 12th in the 100 breaststroke at sectional, while sophomore Cliff Rector placed 5th in the 500 free. Exchange student Peter Thomsen placed 12th in the 500 free and the 200 free relay team of Ryan Cassidy, Cory Armstrong, Steve Gunn, and Brett Edstene placed 10th.

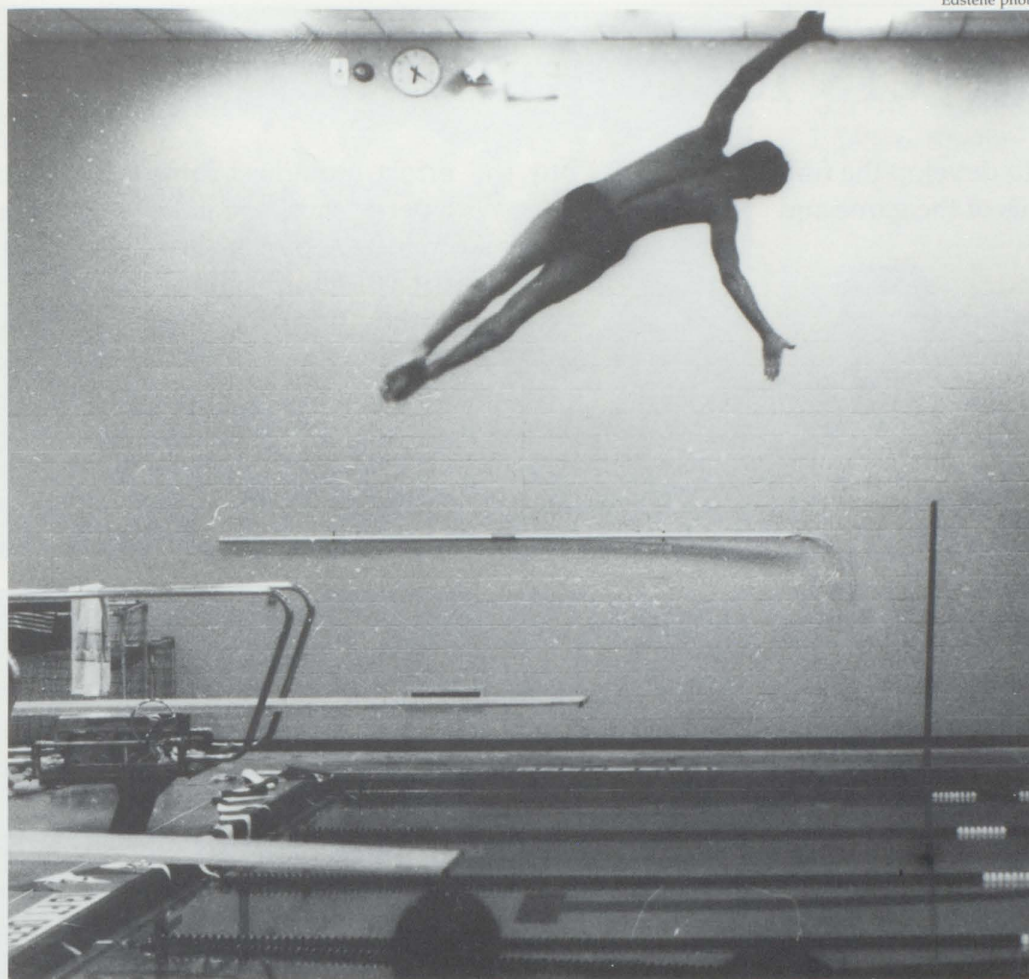

The 400 free relay team of Alonzo, Beattey, Thomsen, and Rector placed 5th.

JV players learn the ropes

All sports begin with the development of essential skills and talent. Many years of practice and training are required in order to reach the varsity level. The skills and essentials are taught and sharpened to perfection at the junior varsity level.

The junior varsity level provides the valuable experience athletes need to compete in the advanced varsity level. The coaches and the players know the importance of the junior varsity competition.

"The purpose of junior varsity baseball program is to develop the fundamentals of the game and the personal integrity required for continued participation in years to come," junior varsity baseball coach Gary Brown said.

"The outcome of the game is not always what's important, but the effort that's put forth is. With personal dedication, the players have an opportunity to build a strong foundation for baseball on the varsity level at a later date," he added.

Since the North Central Conference is one of the toughest conferences in the state, the junior varsity experience allows athletes to go up against the competition early before moving on to a varsity team.

"The junior varsity allowed me to improve my skills before making the big step to varsity," junior Shelley Polston said.

We've got spirit, yes we do!

School spirit is not easy to come by; a lot of hard work is involved. Now cheerleading may be commonly recognized as the backbone of team spirit, but don't forget the people behind the scenes.

A major source of pride and spirit for the Trojans was the athletic office staff. Mr. Vance Meier entered his seventh year coordinating and directing all athletic activities for the high school. Working at Meier's side was Cheryl Betten, the athletic department secretary.

Also, in the athletic office was Dick Leitch, who made sure that everyone received the tickets they wanted for athletic events.

A more obvious source of spirit was the cheerleading squad. This year there were only three cheerleading squads (2 varsity and 1 junior varsity) providing leadership for the crowd and support for the teams.

"At times spirit was hard to come by," senior Tonya Garner said, "but we always seemed to manage." One familiar mascot came out to root for the team - the Trojan Rounding out the Trojan support group were those persons behind the scenes who received little recognition, but who kept things in line. Greg Wood, who taught at North Campus during the day, continued his duties as equipment manager for the athletes.

Dwight "Doc" Frazier saw a lot of action as trainer this year. He wrapped ankles and bandaged wounds of ailing athletes. John Huffman assisted him on occasion.

Even though the names and faces had changed, the Trojan spirit remained the same and strong as ever.

Activities

Joining the fun and fellowship

Did you ever wonder what the school would be like without clubs and organizations?

To begin with, this story would not be written because there would be no yearbook or newspaper staff.

There would have been no fall dance since the student government sponsors it.

The trophy cases that line the hallways would all be bare since most of the trophies belong to the speech team or some other organizations.

The bottom line is, life would be pretty boring without organizations.

Some of the school clubs focused on the interests of the individual students, while other clubs benefitted the entire student body.

Peer tutors. National Honor Society members spent many Saturday mornings tutoring suspension students, as seniors Stuart Griner, Gretchen Dodsen and Kara Squadroni know all too well.

Clubs such as

Art Club and Science Club complemented the same academic areas. Fifty minutes of class time each day just were not enough for these students.

Other organizations were more general in their purposes and interests. For example, students interested in learning about foreign lands could join FORSCO International.

Student government did everything in their power to make the school a better place and to sponsor several extracurricular activities, including the new haunted trail at Memorial Park.

Organizations are often overlooked, but what would the school do without them? They entertain us, they inform us, they give us the opportunity to meet other students for fellowship and fun.

Although being a member is optional, many students found it an opportunity to seize.

Publicity:

Tell it like it is

What would a school be without a newspaper or a yearbook? Students might not be able to remember special moments that happened during a year. It took a lot of hard work, dedication and many extra hours of work to meet deadlines, but the staffs of the Phoenix and the Rosenial pulled it off.

"Some people think that this is just a 'blow off' class," Rosenial editor Brian Graham said, "but everyone must give a 100% effort in order to have a successful publication."

NCCHS students got to enjoy the Phoenix newspaper once every month. Phoenix editor Collin Asberry agreed that it took many extra hours to produce a quality publication.

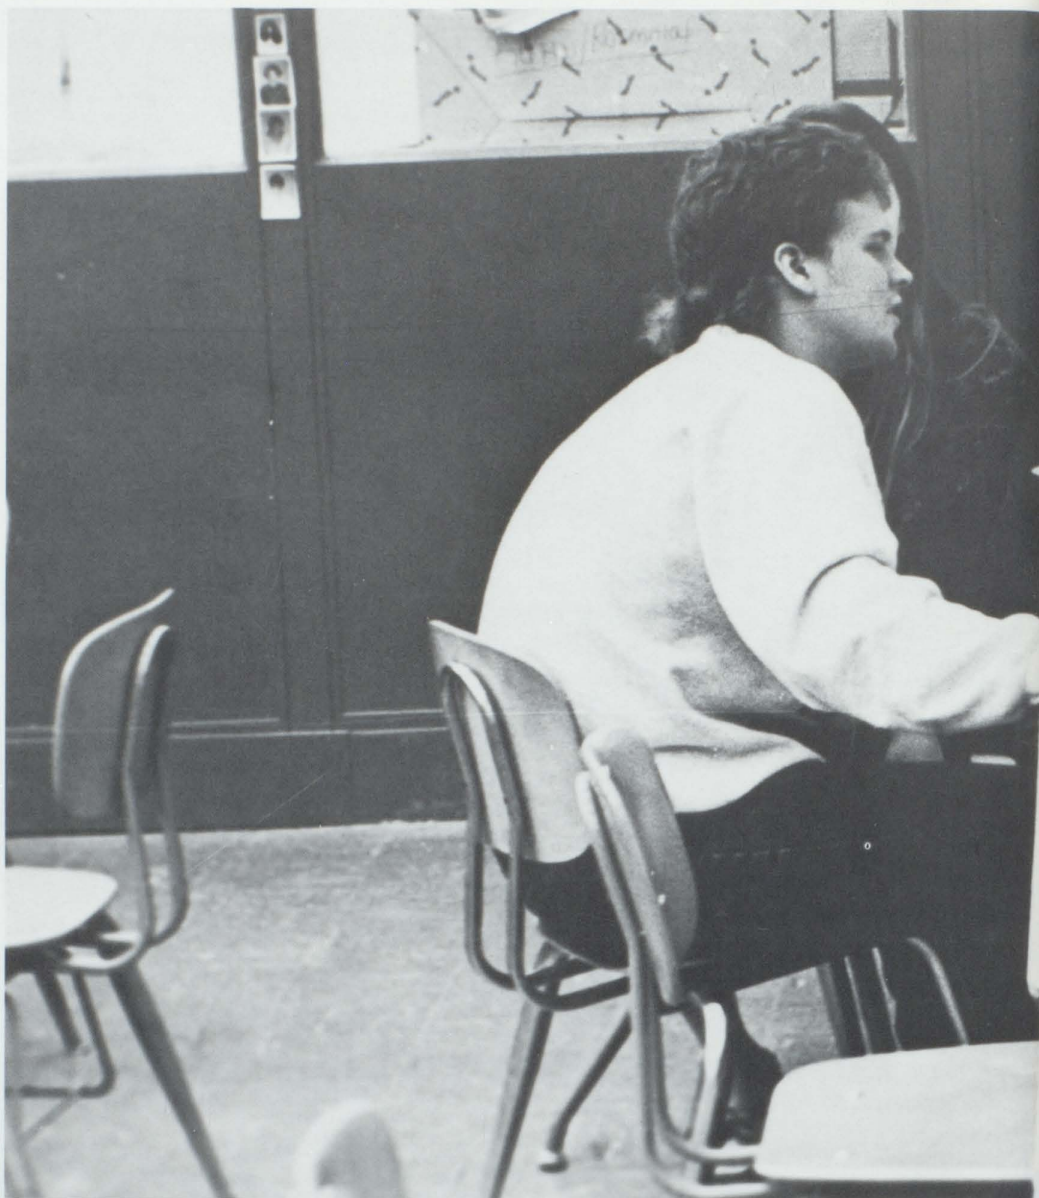

"A lot of hard work and dedication is the key to making the Phoenix a success," he said.

A highlight for the staff was a trip to Exponent Publishers in Hagerstown to see the Phoenix being printed.

"I didn't realize there was so much involved in printing our newspaper," junior Shondae Ferrell said.

Photographers put in their fair share of time covering events, also.

Action:

Get things done

Several organizations at NCCHS set out to make a mark on the world or to at least become familiar with the environment around them.

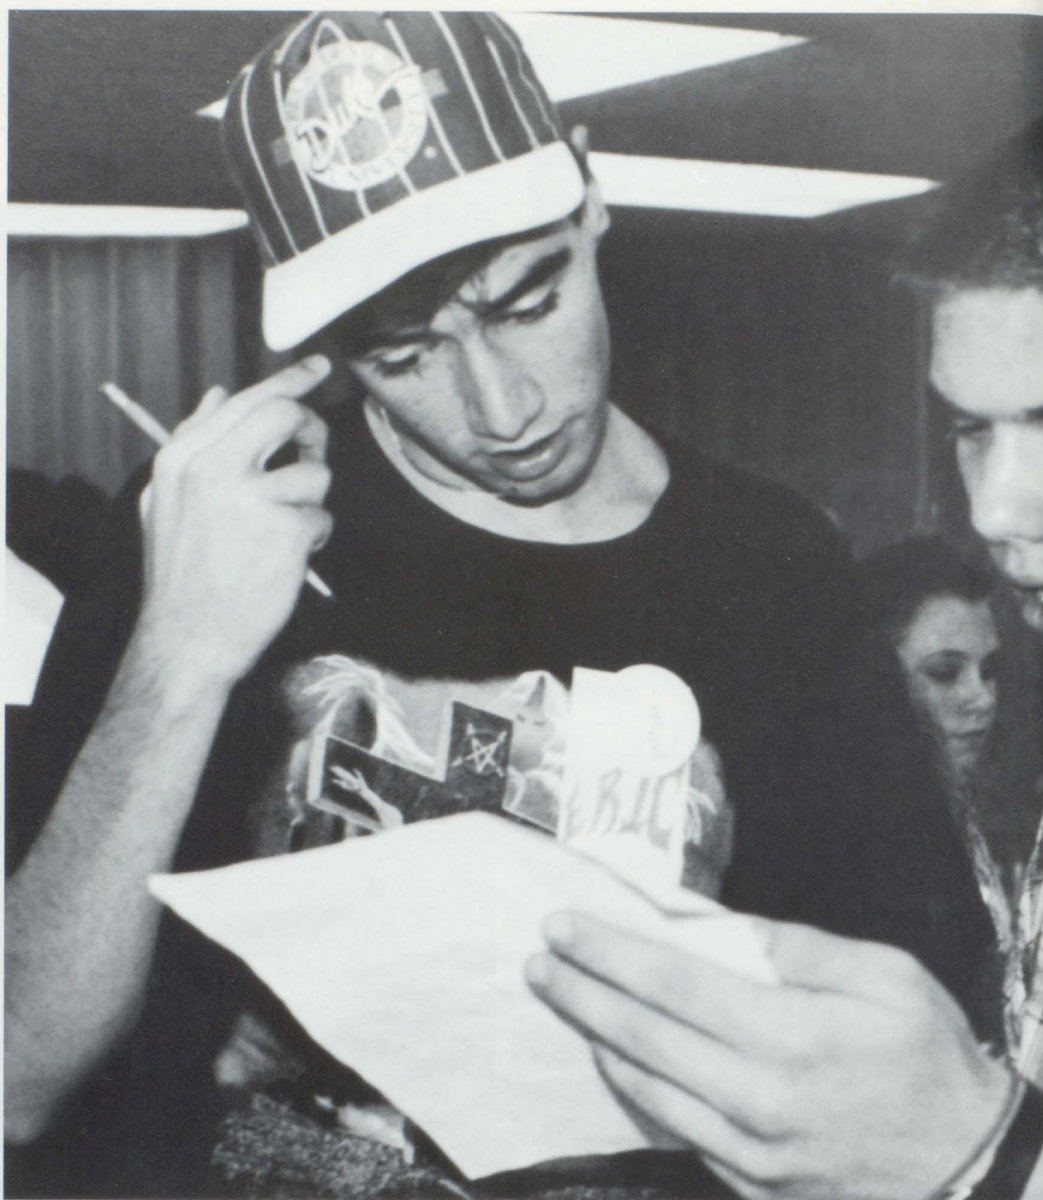

Student government members found that there was never a dull moment with that group. From collecting canned food to sponsoring dances, members spent many hours of planning and preparing to make NCCHS a pleasant place.

Environmental awareness was stressed by student government this year. The group placed recycling stations in the school so that students could recycle paper and aluminum cans.

"In the past few years, the environment has been a very hot issue, and people have started to take notice," senior student government president Emily Willis said. "It is important not to let this issue fade off because the problem will remain unless action is continued."

National Honor Society members lent support to the world, also, in an entirely different manner. Members of NHS, a group which recognizes and stresses academic achievement, spent many Saturday mornings tutoring students on Saturday suspension.

Another positive project was the toy drive at Christmas time. The toys were given to needy children.

Drama:

Break a leg

The show must go on! And it did. With the talent of the actors onstage and the skill of the Bundy tech crew backstage, two successful plays were presented to eager audiences.

A change occurred this year, though, as the musical was held in the fall instead of in the spring. No one seemed to mind though, because You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown was a success.

The musical had a small cast of only six characters, but they played their parts very well. Chris McCormick played the title role while April Elliott played Lucy, Jennifer Cleveland was Peppermint Patty, Gretchen Dodson played Snoopy, Nathan Snyder was Linus, and Josh Hamilton portrayed Schroeder.

The spring play was one of Shakespeare's comedies, A Midsummer Night's Dream. This production consisted of a larger cast than the fall play, and the audiences seemed to enjoy it, too.

"It was a lot of hard work to pull it off, but in the end, the plays were a big success," senior Stuart Griner, who was in the spring play as well as a member of the Bundy Tech staff, said.

The Bundy Tech staff was not only responsible for the lights and sound at both the plays, but they also took care of the technical aspects for special events, such as basketball games and convocations, as well.

They, along with the talented actors, entertained audiences with two spectacular theatrical performances.

Speech/Debate

Voice an opinion

The speech and debate teams brought home the hardware and sent six speakers to the national tournament in Fargo, North Dakota to cap off a record year.

"I can't remember when we have had such a dominant team," Coach Jim Robbins said, "and I couldn't be any prouder of them as individuals or as a team."

The Trojans came on strong from the outset and continued to build strength as the season progressed. In fact, the team peaked in performance at the crucial moment as six speakers qualified for the national competition.

For seniors Lisa Farmer, Scott Johnson, Heather Malony, and Chris McCormick, sophomore Jamie Garvin, and freshman Jennifer Decker, all of the hard work finally paid off as they led the way to victory in the Hoosier South District contest and guaranteed their appearances in the national tournament in June.

As if this weren't enough, the team brought home first place finishes from the sectional and regional tournaments, qualifying 21 speakers for the state meet.

Senior Heather Maloney made her mark in the speech record books, as she found success both in extemp speaking and in debate.

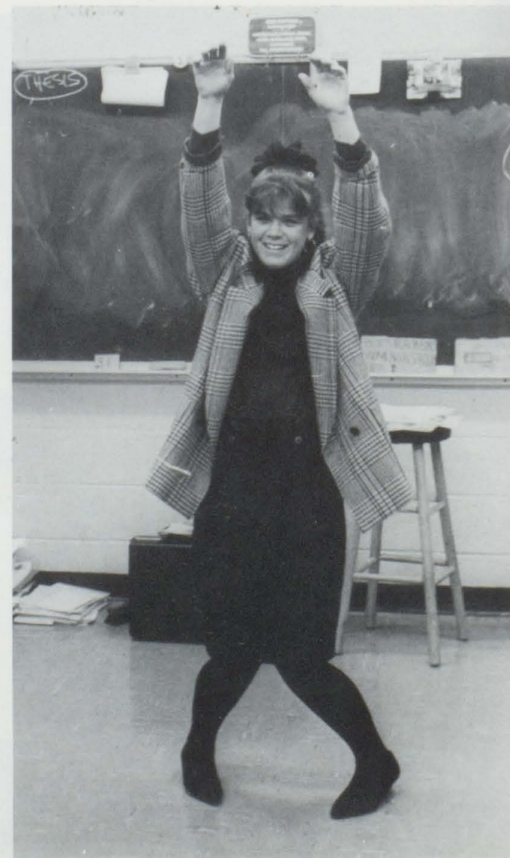

As the season drew to a close, speakers could walk down the English hall with pride, knowing that the bulging trophy case was the result of their hard work.

Languages

A cultural experience

Helping students learn more about countries than our own was the main goal of three organizations. FORSCO, Spanish Honor Society, and German Club helped students have fun and have a cultural experience at the same time.

FORSCO not only helped the six foreign exchange students feel at home, but also gave other students a chance to get to know more about them and their countries. FORSCO was open to any foreign language student who wanted to increase his knowledge of the world in which we live.

"FORSCO has been a fun experience for me this year," sophomore Julie Bouslog said. "It gave me the chance to meet people from other countries and learn about their cultures."

German Club and Spanish Honor Society also focused on other lands.

"Being in German Club has helped me gain more knowledge of the German culture that I otherwise may never have known," sophomore Carrie Goodwin stated.

Although Art Club did not focus on a foreign land or language, it did give students an opportunity to expand their cultural awareness and to express themselves through the language of the arts.

One of the highlights of the year for Art Club members was a trip to Chicago.

"The trip to Chicago was probably the best part of Art Club," sophomore Melanie Graham said. "It was fun and interesting."

Members also worked at a booth for HeritageFest in the fall.

Art Club, FORSCO, SHS, and German Club were rewarding cultural and educational experiences that also proved to be fun.

Lifestyle

Finding the truth

Three organizations at NCCHS this year dealt with the study of human life and religion.

The Fellowship of Christian Athletes, also known as FCA, offered athletes the chance to discuss their religious views and sportsmanship.

"At first I wasn't sure about going," sophomore Anna Rhodessaid. "but I am glad I joined because it is fun and a great way to meet new people."

FCA met once every two weeks. During these meetings, members discussed a range of topics and offered support to their peers.

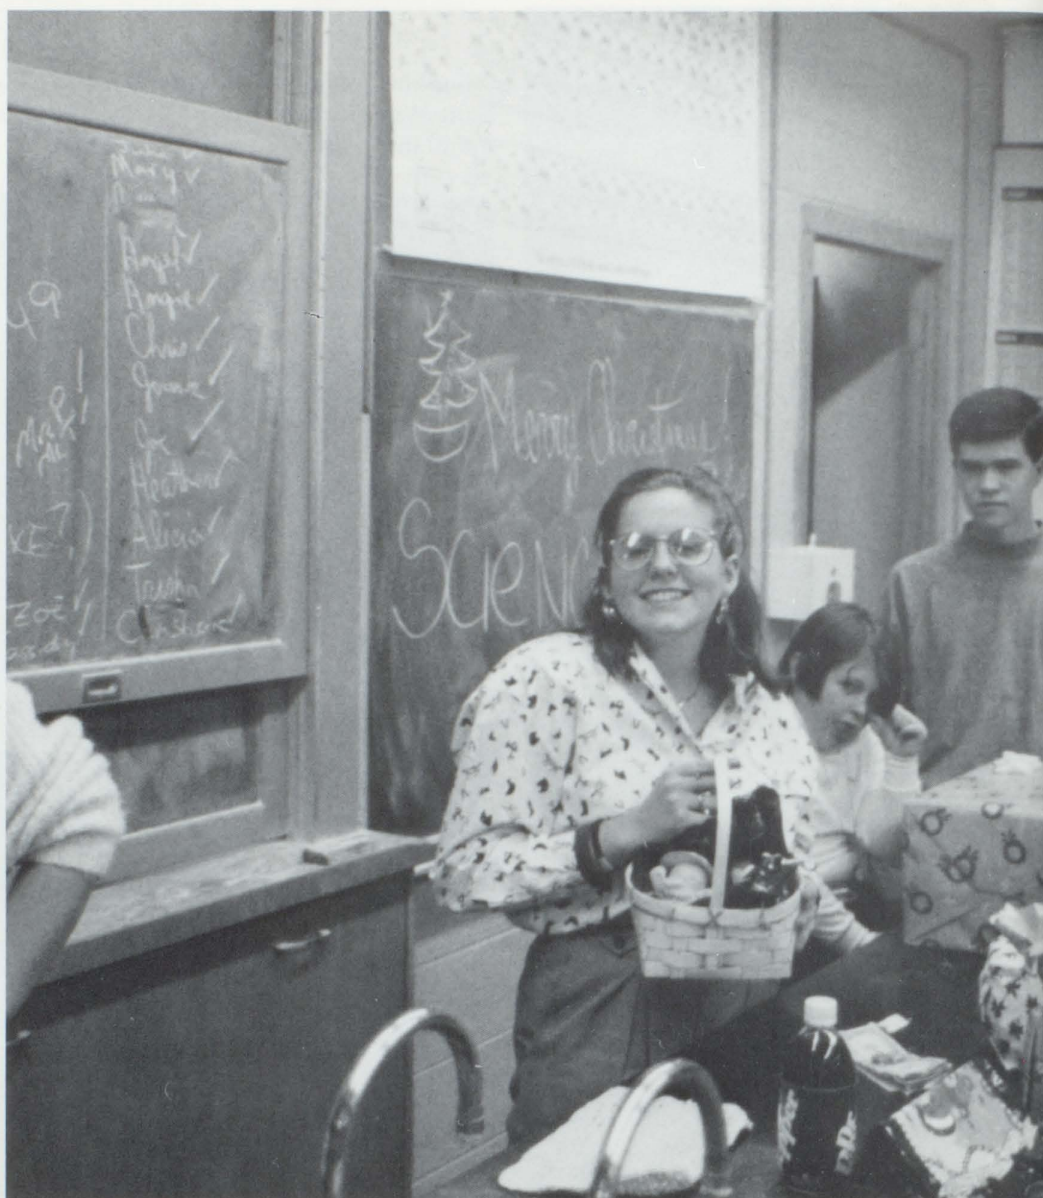

Mark and Bev Cronk sponsored FCA. The officers for the boys were Shawn Tabor, president; Aaron Cole, vice president; Brandon Riggs, secretary-treasurer. For the girls, officers were Michelle Cox, president; April Elliott, vice president; Emily Willis, secretary-treasurer.

Students for Christ carried on the tradition of celebrating and studying Christian faith and values. Their motto was "We're going to broaden our horizons" (1 Timothy 4:12).

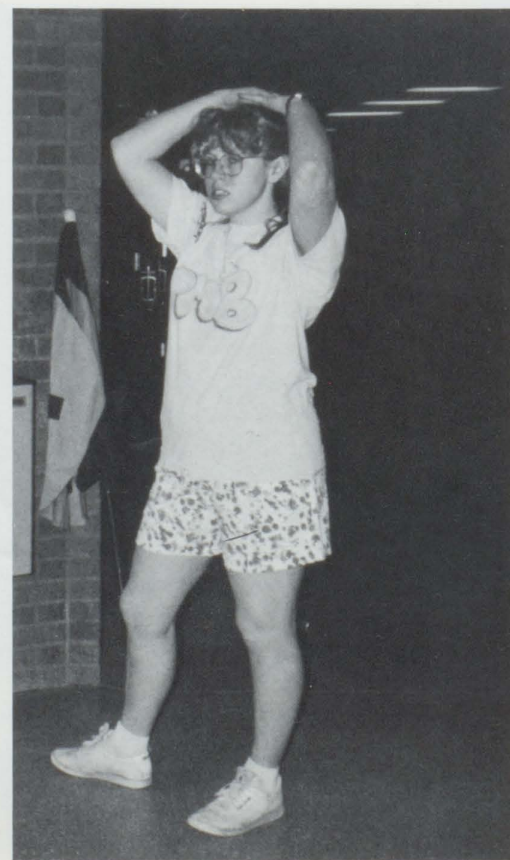

Students for Christ officers included Paul Davidson, president; Alisha Allen, vice president; Angie Abrams, treasurer; and Sarah Jones, secretary.

One of the newest clubs NCCHS offered was Science Club. Science Club performed many different experiments, even having some explosions of excitement.

Mrs. Polk and Mr. Thompson sponsored the Science Club. The officers included Joe Stinchcomb, president; JaMarc Neeley, vice president; James Thurston, secretary; and Angie Abrams, treasurer.

Community

Sharing and caring

The recession hit New Castle hard this year. The school, too, was not without repercussion.

News of financial difficulties dominated headlines in the local paper much of the year, with studies being conducted to determine a solution.

New Castle Schools found themselves in an increasingly familiar situation, having to find sources of income to fund their twenty million dollar budget.

In the community, people were tightening their belts, also.

Many people found that they had to set a budget and stick with it in order to make ends meet.

News of a tax increase did not set well with some, but in the end, everyone benefitted because the increase helped the school settle its crisis.

The financial crunch did not stop there, though. Many businesses felt the effects of the economic conditions, too. This, however, did not stop them from giving their support to many NCCHS projects.

Local businesses and patrons contributed thousands of dollars in support of the school. Athletic programs and posters spotlighted local merchants who purchased advertisements.

In addition, both school publications - The Phoenix and The Rosennial - sought help from the community to defray the costs of printing.

Probably the most important way the community supported NCCHS was through scholarships. Many merchants, service organizations, and individuals donated their money so that students could further their educations.

"For a community this size, New Castle supports their schools more than any other in the state," Principal John Newby said.

Christina,

You have made us very proud of you! We wish you an exciting and successful life.

Love,
Mom and Dad

DEBRA JO WOOTEN

Debra,

You have been bringing sunshine into our lives since you were small and greeted us each morning with a smile. You have done well in academics and athletics, and we are very proud of you.

Yes Deb, you can do whatever you set your heart and mind to, but don't forget to honor the One who gives you the ability (Phil 4:13).

You are loved always,
Mom and Dad

JOHN ANDERSON

Congratulations John on winning at State. We wish you success and happiness for your future.

Our love,
Mom and Dad

SHELLEY ONDERCIN

Shelley,

You have made our lives complete. We are so glad you are our daughter. Thank you for all the joy and love you have given us. We are so proud of you.

May the future bring you all the happiness and success you deserve.

Love,
Mom and Dad

Dear Ashley,
When I think back to the day you were born, I smile. Since that day, you have added so much to my life. I want you to always remember that wherever life takes you, whatever dreams you follow, and no matter how "grown-up" you are, you'll always be my precious daughter... and my love will always go with you.
God bless and keep you.
Love, Mom

Final Inning

Wrapping up the year

As the weather became warmer, the rain began to fall, and the trees and flowers began to bloom, students and staff began to feel the itch of "spring fever". The year that seemed to have only just begun was now coming to a close.

Looking back upon the year, one can see that there were many joys as well as sorrows. At the annual Achievement Day convocation, students who excelled in academic areas were honored by their peers, their teachers, their parents, and the community for their fine work.

Sam Rhine made his tri-annual visit to Take a hike... Henry David Thoreau would probably be happy to see these student government members observing the peace and beauty of nature during their leadership camp. (Geozeff photo)

Caught in the act... Mrs. Ann West seems a little surprised to be the focus of attention for a photographer. As guidance counselor, Mrs. West kept busy keeping students in line.

NCCHS to provide students with important information about some health risks.

Along with the serious moments there were some lighthearted times of fun and fellowship.

Band members had the chance to jazz things up a bit during their Big Band Bash.

The MORP (prom backwards) dance gave students the chance to relax and enjoy themselves without all of the expense and frills of a formal dance.

During spirit week, students took to the hallways to show their spirit and try to outdo what the other classes were doing.

While the focus of most of the attention was on the events that were directly related to school, many students found success in other areas.

Junior Gene Cooney played for one of the top high school hockey teams in Indiana. Other students found success in the bowling alley.

The Trojan spirit was alive and well - both inside and outside the walls of NCCHS.

Big Band Bash

Sweatin' to the oldies

The big band era came back to life at NCCHS in March as the Jazz Band presented the annual Big Band Bash.

The community and the school came together on Friday, March 13 for the annual event. For the occasion, the girls gym was transformed into a Big Band era dance hall, where the music and dance reflected the era.

The jazz lab band and the jazz ensemble provided musical entertainment for the evening, playing songs from the 1940s.

Also getting into the swing of things were the music teachers. Choir teacher Jalean Addington and band director Mark Middleton belted out tunes from the past, while the band directors joined the jazz bands in instrumental entertainment.

Members of the community dawned their dancing clothes and joined the fun, doing dances such as the polka throughout the evening.

Senior Paul Davidson's mother received a special surprise when the crowd joined the band in singing "Happy Birthday" to her.

"It was neat to hear how the music has changed over the years," Melanie Graham said.

Excellence

Achievement honored

The thirty-second annual Achievement Day convocation kicked off the year at NCCHS. Five students were awarded jackets for their academic achievements. Seniors Leslie Brock, Sarah Criswell, Gretchen Dodson, Jennifer Haskett and Michael Schatzlein received recognition from their peers and their teachers as they walked across the stage in Bundy Auditorium where Principal John Newby stood with their NCCHS honor blazers.

Eight other seniors were recognized for their academic excellence also. These students received crests and certificates.

The work of the underclassmen did not go unnoticed, either. Twenty-eight juniors were honored with certificates for their outstanding academic performances.

As has become tradition, the Trojan Marching Band kicked off the ceremony by playing music from their field show routine.

Following the presentation of awards, another tradition was acknowledged as the Trojan spirit was rekindled.

THE WINNERS

John Anderson: Archery is a serious sport

According to Webster's, archery is the art, practice, or skill of shooting with bows and arrows. Not too many students know that archery is a sport. Granted, it is relatively unknown to most people in this area, but to one student at NCCHS it is a way of life.

John Anderson has been shooting a bow for nearly three years. He has competed in indoor competition for more than a year and has won two state districts in his division, the 1992 pre-state warm-up shoot, and the 1992 Indiana Field Archery Association Championship.

John usually shoots three to four times a week for about one to four hours at the Serious Sportsman Archery Club in Spiceland, where he has been a member for two years. John Anderson is truly a winner.

Slip sliding away

"It's a great day for hockey," former Pittsburgh Penguins coach "Badger" Bob Johnson said.

Most students in this school would say, "No, it is not." There are, however, a few exceptions to this. Students like Alan Rains, Angie Abrams, Jack Turner, Matt Rash, and Matt Razor go to Indianapolis every weekend to watch the Indianapolis Ice play.

"We decided to do something different, so we went to an Ice game," Rains said. "It turned out to be a blast, and we have gone ever since."

Junior Gene Cooney is not only a hockey fan, but he is also a hockey player. Cooney has been playing since he was ten. Last year he and junior Larry Cowan played in a league at the State Fairgrounds in Indianapolis.

This year Cooney played in the goalie position for the Indianapolis Park Tudor High School team. His team eventually finished second in the state high school tournament. Cooney said he would like to go to college on a hockey scholarship.

Hockey is a sport that is becoming more and more popular every day. The 1980 "Miracle on Ice" U.S. Hockey Team won the hearts of all Americans. They spurred a rapid growth in hockey interest.

More and more people are thinking, "It's a great day for hockey."

Having a ball - and winning, too

A childhood dream of almost all kids is to win a state tournament of some kind. This almost came true for five New Castle boys.

Seniors Brian Graham and Jason Slavey, juniors Mark Hart and Mike Kendall, and eighth grader Chad Thompson bowled in the state bowling tournament for the Youth Alliance Bowling Association bowlers held at Terre Haute. The team shot a grand total of 3,087.

The team finished third in last year's tournament at South Bend with a total of 3,249.

"Bowling in the state tournament is one of the big things I look forward every year," Graham said. "It's always a lot of fun, especially when you're bowling well."

This year's tournament was the last for Graham, who is ending his junior bowling career after this year and moving up to the adult leagues. The other four are still looking forward to further accomplishments in the YABA.

Jason Slavey bowls over his competition

Jason Slavey was a member of his seventh and eighth grade football teams. But two knee surgeries made it impossible for Slavey to pursue his football career. So he decided to take up an alternative sport - bowling. What once was a leisure sport has turned into a potential career for the avid bowler.

Slavey picked up bowling in 1988 and now bowls almost every day. To date he has won 20 trophies, 15 plaques, a jacket, and a $100 scholarship. His credentials include placing 3rd in the Indiana Junior Marathon, 2nd in the Terre Haute Kegler Open, 5th in the Anderson Scholarship Kegler Open, 2nd in the Indianapolis Junior Invitational, and 5th in the Brown Bowl Junior Invitational.

Jason finished first in qualifying for the Indiana State Masters and the Queens Tournament held in Terre Haute. He shot 1290 over twelve games. That is an average of 215.

Jason has bowled with such pros as John Mazza, Doug Spicer and Ken Amos, and has met such bowling stars as Earl Anthony, Mike Aulby, and Scott Devers.

He not only bowled with Mazza, Spicer, and Amos, but he beat them as well. He shot 703 and they shot 702.

"I know it is only one pin," Slavey said, "but anytime you can beat the pros, you should feel good."

Slavey's future plans include bowling on the nationally ranked Vincennes University bowling team. He would eventually like to try his luck on the Professional Bowlers Tour.

Slavey is definitely one of the many winners in NCCHS.

NCCHS library one of the best

Answer: The most important part of school when it comes to research. Question: What is the library?

What would students do without a library? Who knows? For one thing, students would be out of luck when it came to doing research papers. A library is everyone's friend.

The ability to do on-line searching was a new addition to the NCCHS library this year. For this the library was hooked up with a major data base company in California. This allowed for a class-type program. The program cost fifteen dollars per hour to use, but it was well worth the cost for students who used it.

NCCHS was the first school in Indiana to run all of the programs for the library on one network. Not even any of the major universities in the state had the kind of state of the art technology that the NCCHS library had.

According to NCCHS librarian Sharon Lyskowski, the library was a few steps ahead of where major computer magazines say schools like New Castle should have been.

According to Phi Delta Kappan Magazine, more information has been produced in the last thirty years than in the previous 5,000. The amount of information available doubles every eight years.

The NCCHS library system would not have been possible if it were not for the high school administrators who knew what was going on and pushed for it. The New Castle Chrysler High School library is one of the best of its kind.

Trying out the equipment...Senior Amy Cummings uses the library technology to help with an assignment.

Canned food drive labeled a success

NCCHS students came through again when they were asked to help a worthy cause. The student government canned food drive netted more than 2,000 cans and boxes of food. These items were then distributed to families who were in need of food for their Christmas dinner.

The project, which is usually held in the fall around the Thanksgiving or Christmas holiday, has turned into an annual event. The student government depends heavily on student participation. The students are asked to bring in as many cans as they can. Some teachers even give extra credit for participating.

This year's class winner for most cans collected was Mrs. Carmony's English class.

The event goes right along with the season. It is better to give than to receive.

Recycle, NCCHS

Three years ago NCCHS started their recycling program. A group of interested students and teachers began the recycling project as a way to show their concern for the future of the earth.

What started out as a celebration for Earth Day and environmental awareness became a landslide of concern and dedication by students and teachers.

This year recycling centers sprang up around the school, encouraging students and teachers to deposit empty aluminum cans in the huge Coke containers. Also, teachers were encouraged to set up recycling stations for papers. Student government members collected the "trash" once a week, and set it aside as a treasure for someone to recycle.

Students at NCCHS seem to have done their part with the recycling of cans and paper. Over 30,000 pounds of paper were collected through recycling.

Recycling was not time-consuming, and it did the environment lots of good. At NCCHS recycling was a winning program.

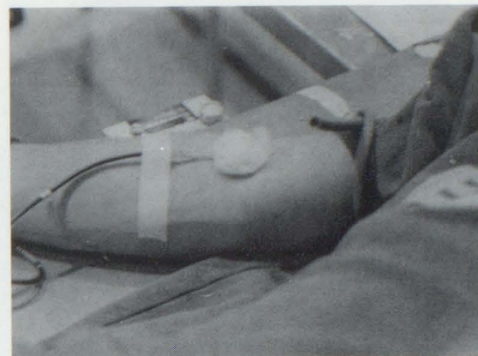

NCCHS students lose blood to give life

Step 1: Students were asked to answer a series of personal questions to test their suitability as a donor.

Step 2: Students were asked to squeeze an object with their hand while the needle was inserted.

Step 3: Students waited while the blood was being drawn from their arm.

Step 4: Students were given snacks to eat while they colored pictures and waited for their dismissal.

Step 5: Although the whole process may have seem intimidating, students left the donation area with smiles on their faces.

Motivation...In mid-April Craig McFarlane visited NCCHS. He spoke to area high school students about making the most of their lives. McFarlane, who is blind, is a well-known motivational speaker. He has found success, despite his handicap, in many athletic areas, including skiing, for which he holds a world record.

MORP

It's all backward!

Flannel shirts, blue jeans and slam dancing were typical of a new kind of dance at NCCHS this year called the MORP.

MORP, or prom spelled backwards, gave students an opportunity to have fun at a dance without spending a lot of money on formal clothes and fancy dining.

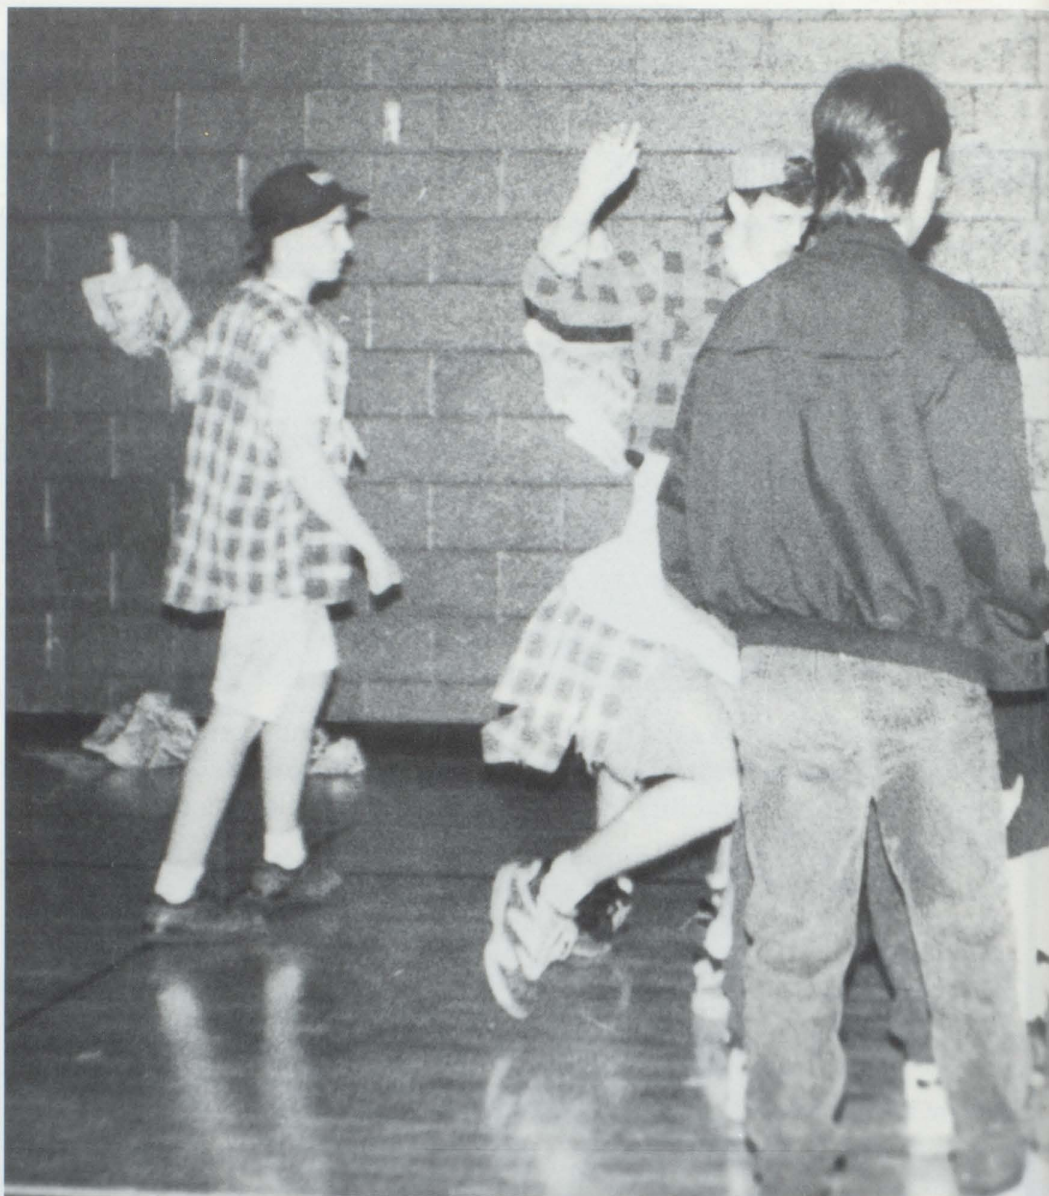

The style of dancing at the MORP dance was different, also. Instead of a lot of slow, close dancing with dates, fast songs provided the opportunity for students to show off their individual dance styles.

Early in the evening several male dancers introduced the new sensation of slam-dancing. For this dance students backed up, then ran forward toward each other, jumping up to "slam" the other dancers. This activity was soon stopped, however, when senior Gary Davidson was injured after being slammed.

A highlight of the evening came when senior Gary Davidson and junior Heather Crawford were crowned king and queen of the dance.

"The best part of the MORP was the cat hanging out of the trash can," senior Tonya Garner said, referring to the background for the pictures.

"The slam-dancing was good too," she added.

Breakaway...Senior Troy DeHart helps junior Shannon Smith tackle the latest break dance movement.

Can I have this dance?...Senior Stephanie Beavers and her date from Tri High, Shane Phelps, enjoy a moment of slow dancing.

Help...Seniors Matt White, Jayson Nunn, Eric Holcomb and Collin Asberry rush to the rescue after senior Gary Davidson is injured while slam-dancing.

See no evil, hear no evil, speak no evil...Paul Burke, Keith Beavers and Tony King look innocent as they take a break from the action.

Comfort zone...The MORP was an informal dance, so students could wear everyday clothes, as this group of girls model.

You miss school, you miss out!

It's worth the effort

Throughout the year, many goals were set and achieved, and many records were broken. These new records, along with those old marks that still stand unbroken, will be the basis of the goals to be set and hopefully achieved for future generations.

Although most people think of shattering records in athletic competitions, athletics was not the only area in which records were challenged. Many other areas, such as speech and academics, enjoyed an abundance of success.

To break a record is a great accomplishment. It also stands as a goal for others to achieve. That is what a record is all about. If one tries, but fails, he has only failed physically, not mentally. That is what NCCHS is all about: not always achieving, but always giving a 100% effort.

Final Inning

Scoring a winner

The buzzer sounds, the fans start to leave the stadium. The ballgame is over. Just like a game, the yearbook must come to a close as well. The yearbook does not become a yearbook without a lot of hard work and effort.

The same applies in a game. Achievement in anything does not come unless hard work and effort is applied.

It is now time to think about next year, whether it be the football or basketball team, speech team, or yes, the Rosennial. Next year's staff must now start to make plans for another year of hard work in order to produce another yearbook.

In reality, the ballgame never ends; it just changes.

COLOPHON

The 1992 Rosennial was printed by Josten's Printing and Publishing Company in Clarksville, Tennessee. Kim Ash was the company representative.

600 copies were printed and sold starting at fifteen dollars. The book contains 176 hard-bound pages with a supplement which includes spring activities. The trim size is 9x12.

The lithograph cover was designed by the Rosennial staff and Mr. Ash. The cover is HI GL LT 478 with one applied color (Kelly Green #327).

Special thank you's go out to Ron Tower (sports photos), Mr. Newby and Mr. Geozeff (support), Mr. Ash (checking in), Miss Kuhn, and parents of staff members.

Everyone wins...Administrators Vance Meier (Athletic Director), Don Geozeff (Assistant Principal) and John Newby (Principal) seem pleased with the outcome for the school year.

Hard work pays off for 286 students

On a warm evening in early June, over 280 seniors entered the fieldhouse for their final visit as NCCHS students. When they left a couple of hours later, they found that they had been given a new status: alumni.

After the traditional entrance of the seniors and the procession down to the floor, senior Abby Lyon addressed her classmates. "The world is a jungle, and we are about to begin our safari through it," she told her classmates.

Next, senior Gretchen Dodson took the stage and challenged fellow seniors to make a difference in the world.

Then Mr. Newby presented 286 seniors who had completed the requirements to Dr. Williams for the presentation of diplomas by members of the school board. First in line to receive diplomas were valedictorian and class vice president Leslie Brock, followed by salutatorian Sarah Criswell. Next in line were the class officers: President Michelle Cox, Secretary April Elliott and Treasurer Chris McCormick.

Let the fun begin!

The last week wasn't so bad after all

Once final exams were over, seniors had time to relax and enjoy their time together as the final days of their high school career came to a close.

The annual picnic drew a large crowd as seniors sought the opportunity to cool off in the lake after suffering through the heat of the school year. For those not daring enough for an encounter with the still-chilly lake water, other sources of entertainment, including volleyball, were offered.

Also during the final week of school, seniors were bombarded with rehearsals. On Wednesday morning they showed up at Bundy Auditorium for Recognitions practice. The following day, they reported to the fieldhouse to practice that all-important walk across the stage during the graduation ceremony.

Earlier in the month, senior girls enjoyed the breakfast and program at the 63rd annual May Breakfast, sponsored by the local Business and Professional Women's Club. Senior Jamie Webb was crowned queen of that event.

Stars come out...Many important persons, including (clockwise) Dr. Larry Williams, April Elliott, Marilyn Bowman, Dr. Ray Pavy, Bill Tucker, and Vanessa Tucker joined in the festivities at Night Club.

Fun times...Gable Lowe seems to be having fun with her friends.

Don't bother me...Adam Lewis seems to be comfortable at the dice table.

It won't open...Emily Willis seems to be having a hard time getting a midnight snack from the refrigerator.

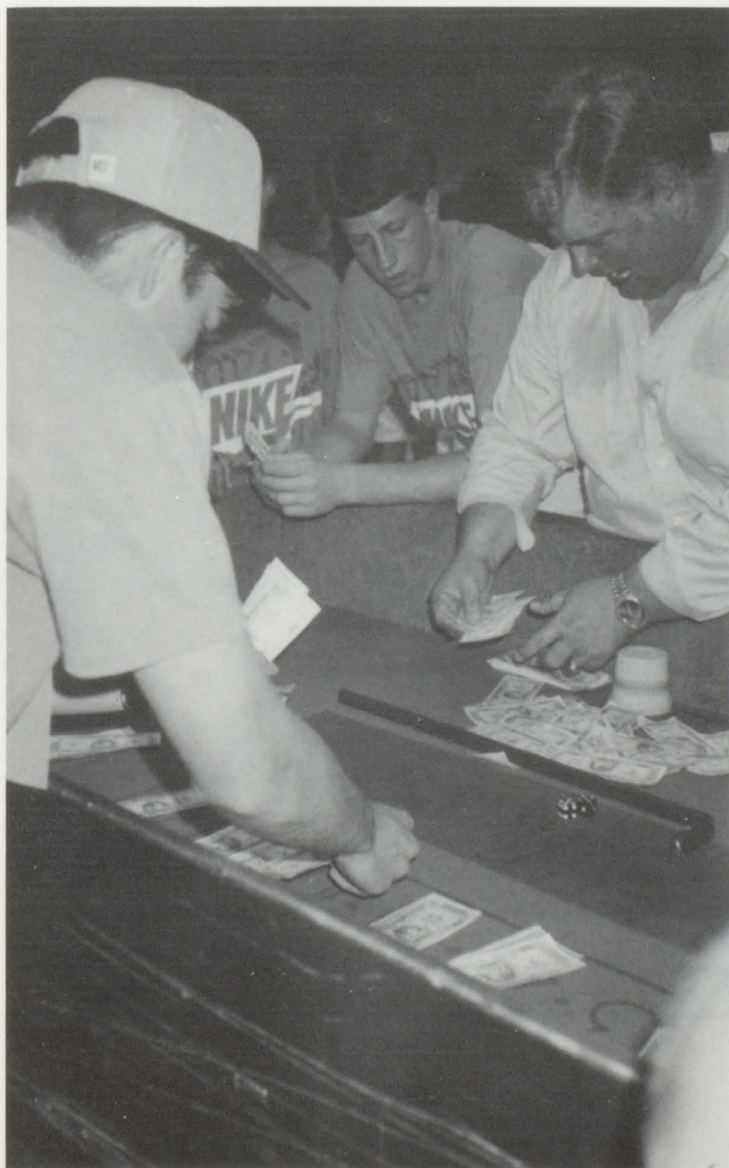

After the ceremony, the fun begins

Although the graduation ceremony ended before 10 p.m., the night was still young for the new graduates. Once the fieldhouse lights were shut down, the southern portion of the school was opened for the students to celebrate their new status at the annual Night club party.

This year's theme, "Happy Holi-daze", presented students the opportunity to celebrate several of their favorite holidays at one time by simply taking a few steps through the hallway.

One of the favorite areas for students was once again the casino room. In this area the grads could gamble their "money" at the tables by rolling the dice or playing blackjack. One area of the room also hosted horse races, where students could choose their horse and watch the results on television.

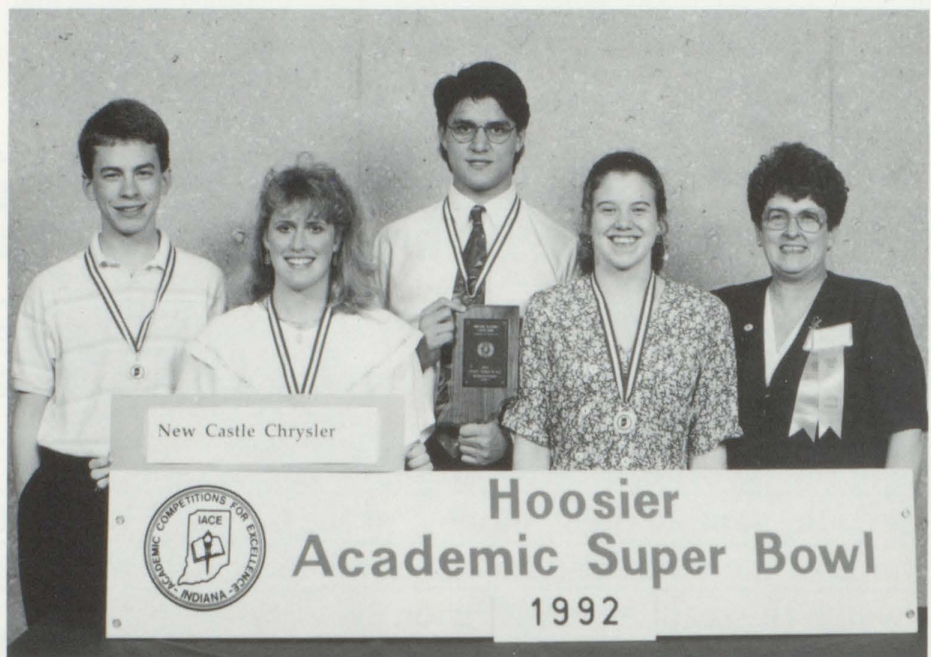

In addition to the games, those in attendance were invited to a Halloween dance. They also could have their pictures taken with cutouts of famous race car drivers.

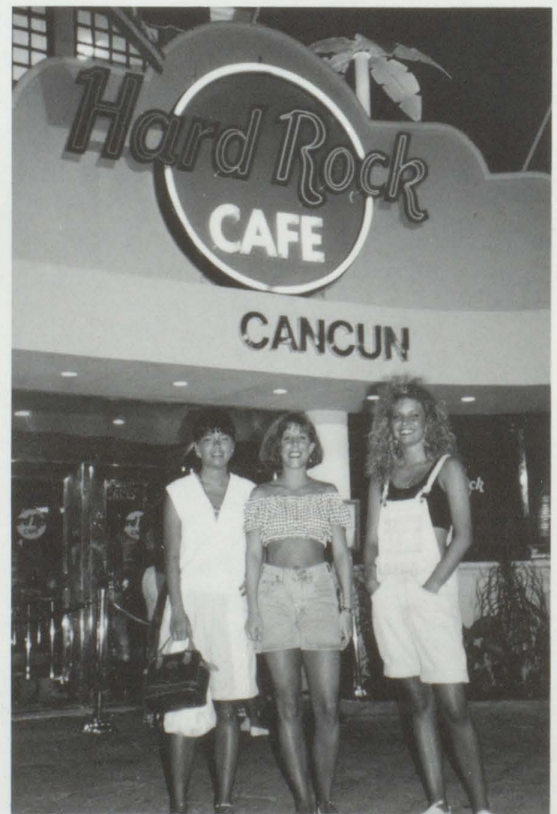

That's terrible...Cary Solida seems to be a little distressed about his hand. Amy Guffey doesn't seem to have any advice for him, though.

It's a winner...Mr. Huffman deals out the dough to Shawn Tabor at the dice table.

ACADEMIC SUPER BOWL...Seniors Michael Schatzlein, Kara Squadroni, Mark Hart and Angela Newland show off the medals and award they received for placing third in the state Academic Super Bowl competition. The group, sponsored by Mrs. Judy Sorrell, placed in the Interdisciplinary event.

A final fling...Spring break is a time to travel for many students, like seniors Karan Frazier, April Guffey and Amber Taulbee, who went to Cancun, Mexico for the week.

Seven compete in national tournament

During the summer, when most students had closed the books on the school year, seven NCCHS Trojan Talkers were busy competing in the national speech and debate tournament in Fargo, North Dakota.

Senior Emily Willis was the only New Castle speaker to place during the week-long event. Emily qualified for the tournament in student congress, where she had the second highest number of speaker points, but when she failed make it into the finals ("It was a gender thing," Coach Jim Robbins said. "The students elected all guys"), she entered the area of impromptu and finished fifth.

Senior Chris McCormick brought home a cup for his efforts in drama, placing in the top 60 in the nation. Sophomore Jamie Garvin narrowly missed the cut in humorous, while Scott Johnson came close to making the cut in US Extemp. Seniors Lisa Farmer and Heather Maloney also were within a few points of making the cut.

The seventh qualifier, freshman Jennifer Decker, competed in drama and poetry.

Ready to go...Jamie Garvin, Chris McCormick, Scott Johnson, Jennifer Decker and Lisa Farmer seem excited about their upcoming trip to nationals. Heather Maloney and Emily Willis also qualified to compete.

Practice makes perfect...Senior Heather Maloney knows that with a little practice, she will be ready to tackle the issues of the world in North Dakota.

Athletics

Spring brings success to Trojans

One never knows what to expect in the spring in Indiana, as athletes on spring sports teams well know.

Swings in temperature, rain, wind, thunder and lightning combined with the sun to keep things interesting.

Coaches and members of six athletic teams kept one eye on the weatherman and the other on the sky

Reach high...Sophomore Carrie Beguhn stretches to reach a high shot.

Ready for action...Seniors Jamie Webb and Katina Roseberry seem eager to get into the baseball sectional.

during the season.

Three sports teams were offered to boys during the spring season: baseball, golf and track. Likewise, girls could choose from three spring sports teams: softball, tennis and track.

"I didn't mind playing (golf) outside, except when it was cold," senior Brian Graham said.

"I love golf, so the weather really didn't bother me, unless it stormed really hard," senior Debra Wooten added.

Spring competition ran into summer for many athletes.

Hitters fly through season

The weather is a funny thing. Sometimes it cooperates, and sometimes it doesn't. The girls softball team knows this all too well.

Throughout the season softball players became accustomed to listening to the end of the day announcements to determine if their game was still on or if practice had been cancelled due to the weather.

When the sun was out, though, the softball players gave their all.

The junior varsity team got off to a slow start, losing their first few games. Later in the season, however, they pulled together to defeat the likes of Blackford (the score was 10-0), Connersville (21-11), and Mt. Vernon (10-9).

The varsity team fared well

throughout the season,

too, led by several experienced seniors.

Probably the most anticipated game of the season was the first-round sectional pairing of New Castle and Shenandoah. The Raiders defeated the Trojans in a regular season game, 14-4, and the Trojans were ready for revenge of that defeat. The Raiders, too, were ready for the game, and they beat the Trojans, 10-2 to capture the sectional title.

Hitters see "Sunnyside" of season

Conditioning in the darkness hours of the winter may not seem to like a fun thing to do, but it certainly paid off for the Trojan baseball team this year.

The hitters compiled a number of positive statistics, including a 15-10 overall record. They won their second consecutive sectional title, defeating county rivals Blue River, Knightstown and Shenandoah, before eventually losing to Richmond in the regional

Another positive aspect of the season was defeating three top 20 teams, including Marion. That victory tied the Trojans for fourth place in the NCC and created a tie for first place between Richmond and Marion.

Three of the five senior players were named all conference. Wade Hamilton saw his name appear for the third time on an all-conference team as he was named all-NCC in baseball, football and wrestling.

Tim Matney earned a spot on the all-NCC baseball team for the second year. Shawn Tabor was also honored.

The team scored 168 runs during the season, averaging nearly seven runs per game.

"Overall, I'm pretty pleased with the team's effort," Matney said, "considering the tough schedule we played."

Netters get into the swing of things

When first year girls tennis coach took over the program this year, both he and the players knew that some adjustments would be made. Ranked high on the list was a new conditioning program for the players.

Although in the beginning the program seemed grueling at the very least, it wasn't long before the fruits of that labor were shown during regular season play.

Senior co-captains

Abby Nantz and Angie Owens provided leadership for the team.

In fact, once Angie got started,

she was hard to beat.

She won fourteen consecutive matches.

As the season opened, the girls dropped the first two matches. They soon got into the swing of the action, however,

They placed fifth in the Richmond Invitational and tied for seventh in the conference tournament.

There were other positive aspects of the season, too. "One of the highlights of the season was coming back to beat Connersville," Burdsall said.

"Overall, it was a very fun season," he added. "I couldn't have asked for a better group of young ladies. They were very easy to work with."

Golfers strive to make par

The boys golf team had very high expectations for the long and rugged season. The team saw a change of venue for their meets, moving from the American Legion Course to Westwood Country Club.

Even with the change, there was some talk about possibly making it all the way to the state meet. However, the talk about going to state soon became talk about just getting out of the sectional. Disappointment was the word all five golfers used to describe the season.

A high placing at the team's first invitational at Monroe Central was a possibility for the team. However, the team finished eleventh out of twelve teams.

The team's struggle continued throughout the season.

Golf: Row 1 -D. Whitted, B. Hess, A. Medley, D. Branscum, A. Benson, J. Shaw, J. Byers. Row 2 -S. McClure, A. Upchurch, B. Graham, J. Singleton, A. Barber, S. Johnson, F. Hamlin, Coach Barry Pratt.

At the halfway point of the season, the linksters dropped three out of four matches with losses to county rival Shenandoah, Connersville, and Black-ford.

A lengthy break in the schedule helped the team to a strong regular season finish.

The team placed fifth in their own invitational fifth in the tough NCC tournament, which was played at Forest Hills Country Club, one of the toughest courses in the state.

The Trojans pulled together to win sectional, but lost in the regional, despite good performances from team members.

Nobody's going to break their stride

Three New Castle runners made it to state this year, capping off successful seasons for both the girls and boys track teams.

Junior Shelly Polston became the only member of the girls squad to advance to state. She qualified by winning the 200-meter dash at regional. Her hopes of a state victory were dashed when she injured her leg at the state meet.

"I didn't really think I would win that race," Polston said. She just missed opportunities to advance to the state meet in two other events, also.

"The girls started out strong," Coach Linda Allen said. "I was pleased with the outcome of the season."

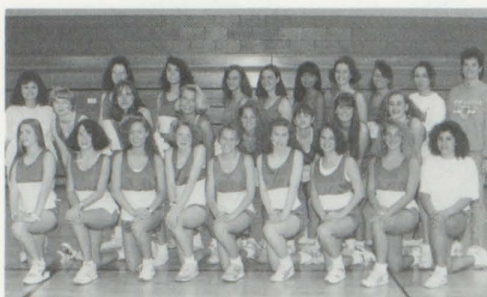

Coach Dave

Clark's team also made strides during the season.

Two members of his team - senior Daniel Millikan and sophomore Keith Beavers qualified for the Millikan advanced by placing second in the 300-meter low hurdles, although it took a while for his qualification to be certified. After two announcements of the "official results", a third revision and a photo finish pronounced him in second place.

The story of Keith Beavers was significant, also. He said he had no plans to compete in track, but when basketball Coach Sam Alford required participation in a spring sport, he chose track, and the rest is history.

The lights go down on another year

When the lights go down and the fans go home, the clean-up crew begins to prepare for the next game. So, too, must we close the school year and prepare for the next year. Lockers must be cleaned, desks and floors must be polished, records must be filed, books must be counted - the list goes on and on.

For some, the end of the year signifies the beginning of a whole new game - the game of life. Graduates who enter the real world will find that the rules may be different, the players may be good or bad, the plays aren't always fair. However, with a good attitude and perserverence, the graduates will come out winners.

As for those who remain at NCHS for the next year, the game will be different, also. New teachers, new classes, new friends - all will be both teammates and competition at times during the year.

It is now time to store the memories of the 1991-92 school year and look ahead to the future. After all, it is A WHOLE NEW BALL GAME!

Oops!..These girls seem to be having fun developing creative poses for their Night Club photo.

The little mermaid...This stunning "doll" made an appearance at the prom dance. Who is this lovely lady, anyway?
